Canada's Boom Continues; Budget Deficit Slashed

Attack Sparks Uproar

Strachan Remark Held Disgraceful

By JOHN MIKA
Legislative Reporter

The legislature exploded like a pressure cooker Thursday night after five hours of increasingly heated debate over the Western Mines development in Strathcona Park.

The argument boiled over into a flood of bitter shouting with Premier Bennett, Opposition Leader Robert Strachan and Liberal Leader Ray Perrault while the rest of the MLAs hooted and catcalled.

For a few moments the House was out of control but the immediate target of the fury — Pat McGeer (L—Vancouver-Point Grey) — was absent.

DEADLY THRUST

The uproar began as Liberals joined Socreds to decry Mr. Strachan's contention that up to 250 pounds of poisonous copper sulphate would go into Buttle Lake from the mining operation each day, posing a deadly threat to the game fish.

Mr. McGeer, pointing out he was a research chemist who had investigated the situation, accused Mr. Strachan of "misleading the House" because all the copper sulphate would be consumed by the mining process and could not enter the lake.

A few minutes later, after Mr. McGeer had left the chamber, Mr. Strachan rose again to attack the Liberals and Socreds for combining to try "to cover up a plan to destroy a public park" by private development.

'NOT DISINTERESTED'

"I was surprised that (McGeer) participated in this debate because according to the records of the companies office, he is not a disinterested party," Mr. Strachan said.

Premier Bennett and Mr. Perrault immediately erupted and all three shouted at each other.

"It was a personal attack on a member of the House," called Mr. Bennett.

WITHDRAWAL ASKED

Attorney-General Robert Bonner demanded a withdrawal of the imputation while Mr McGeer was absent and committee chairman William Speare ordered Mr. Strachan to make a retraction.

But Mr. Strachan began arguing with Mr. Speare and the premier jumped back into the fight:

"As leader of the government and this House I must accept responsibility for the individual integrity of all the members of this House.

"The member for Point Grey has been attacked by the leader of the Opposition in a dastardly way and he was not here to defend himself.

"As leader of the government I do not want this house to be brought down to the same state as Ottawa which the leader of the Opposition has been trying to do at this session."

Mr. Strachan stormed back that the premier was trying to create a scene to divert attention from Strathcona Park's fate.

CREATING CHAOS

"The premier is deliberately trying to create chaos in this house so that public attention will be directed toward the chaos instead of the bankrupt park policies of this government," he said.

"He is trying to create a

RELIEF GROUP SETS OUT

Death-Defying Expedition Completes Vertical Assault

The new milestone in the history of Alpine climbing was accomplished by four West Germans and a Briton, all that was left of a 13-man, three-country group which set out on the wall 30 days ago. Two completed the climb late Thursday.

The final leg of the ascent to the 13,036-foot summit over a treacherous ice field was carried out despite howling winds and temperatures down to 40 below zero.

There had been fear for the safety of the climbers after 16 hours elapsed without contact. But the clouds parted for a time and they could be seen by telescope as they neared completion of their climb.

Then a jubilant radio message from the mist-shrouded peak announced tersely at dusk that the expedition was crowned with success.

West Germans Joerg Lehne, 29, and Guenther Strobel, 24, were the first to reach the summit.

UNDAUNTED BY GALES

Neither gales lashing the Alps nor the death of American teammate John Harlin three days ago stopped the Alpinists.

Eiger has been scaled many times before but never over the vertificial-ascent route.

Today's venture crowns years of efforts by generations of Alpinists, 26, of whom lost their lives on the towering, triangular mountain.

MOUNT CLEMENS, Mich. (UPI) — The U.S. air force said today its top scientific adviser on unidentified flying objects believes marsh gasses were responsible for mass sightings of weird glowing objects this week.

An air force public information employee at Selfridge Air Force Base here said Dr. J. Allen Hynek, scientific adviser to its "Project Blue Book" program to trace UFO sightings, would make the disclosure in a news conference today.

Hynek has been investigating sightings in Michigan this week.

New War Intolerable, Erhard Tells World

BONN (Reuters) — Chancellor Ludwig Erhard today appealed to all non-nuclear powers to follow West Germany's example and formally renounce production of nuclear weapons.

Erhard, presenting a seven-point "peace program" to Parliament, also called on the present atomic powers to reach agreement on the non-proliferation of nuclear weapons.

Erhard said West Germany is prepared to exchange "declarations of renunciation of the use of violence" with Russia, Czechoslovakia and any other European states.

Erhard said his country wants no new war and is doing all in its power to avoid it.

"The thought of a new war is intolerable in the German nation."

Erhard said German reunification is to be achieved only by peaceful means.

He made these other points:

—The most difficult problems among peoples can be peacefully and justly solved.

—West Germany has settled its problems in the West, and would like to settle with its Eastern neighbors, too.

He said he would like a more friendly relationship with Czechoslovakia and that West Germany has no territorial claims on it.

Viet Eyes Election This Year

SAIGON (Reuters) — Prime Minister Nguyen Cao Ky tonight announced plans to speed the country's move from military rule to constitutional government.

Observers here regard the announcement as a major concession to the country's Buddhists whose anti-government demonstrations have sporadically paralysed life in northern cities during the last two weeks.

The 36-year-old prime minister said a council would be appointed within a week to draft a constitution. The constitution should be ready in two months.

He said a national referendum would be held on the proposed constitution and would be followed as soon as possible by general elections.

Informed government sources said tonight the nine generals ruling the country were thinking in terms of elections before the end of this year if the plan went according to the timetable.

The prime minister's announcement came as anti-government agitation moved south from the northern cities of Hue and Da Nang to the coastal city of Nha Trang, 200 miles northeast of Saigon.

Today's demonstration in Nha Trang was the first reported outside the northern area formerly under the control of Lt.-Gen. Nguyen Chanh Thi, whose removal from the ruling junta two weeks ago sparked the unrest.

HUE, DA NANG QUIET

Hue and Da Nang today were reported quiet for the first time since the unrest erupted March 10 into general strikes, student-led demonstrations, school boycotts and anti-government and anti-American speeches over the local radio stations.

But in announcing the new moves towards civilian rule tonight Ky hinted at a clampdown on agitators who so far have been given a free rein by police.

Ky warned that the situation in the northern cities "cannot be allowed to continue." He added: "We must solve the problem . . . by all means."

Nguyen Huu Giao, president of the student wing of a Buddhist political action group called "People's Struggle for the Revolution," today gave Ky until Sunday to answer Buddhist demands for a popularly-elected civilian government.

Giao said "there may be violence" if the government tries to block student demonstrations and warned, "there are plans for any move Ky may make. The students are well prepered."

Quick Bomb Pact Hunted

WASHINGTON (AP) — State Secretary Dean Rusk said today he hopes the United States, Britain and Russia can move promptly toward a treaty banning the spread of nuclear weapons. He suggested France and Communist China might join such a pact.

He said he thinks all the nuclear powers agree that proliferation of nuclear weapons is "dangerous and undesirable."

Warning British PM To Be Shot

LONDON (Reuters) — An anonymous telephone warning to Scotland Yard that someone planned to shoot Prime Minister Wilson prompted tighter security precautions around the campaigning Labor party leader today.

Detectives Thursday night guarded a hall in Dunstable in Bedfordshire while Wilson spoke amid constant interruption from hecklers, who were also active at a London meeting addressed by Conservative Leader Edward Heath.

Meanwhile, the latest opinion polls showed that the landslide victory confidently predicted for the Labor party may be whittled down somewhat by election day next Thursday.

One poll, published by the Daily Express, shows a slight swing toward the Conservatives although still giving labor a hefty lead of 13½ per cent.

The latest national opinion poll shows a slight drop in Labor's lead to 12.2 per cent from 13, and a Gallup poll survey shows Labor's margin had been trimmed to 8.5 per cent from 12.

Lowest in Years Forecasts Sharp

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada's good times have turned into a full-fledged boom with further expansion and higher prices still to come, Finance Minister Sharp reported today.

For the fiscal year ending March 31 he predicted a sharp cut in the federal government's budgetary deficit to $34,000,000—lowest in nine years. It was $38,000,000 in 1964-65 and as high as $791,000,000 in 1961-62.

In his budget speech a year ago Walter Gordon, Mr. Sharp's predecessor, had forecast a $300,000,000 deficit for the current year.

Mr. Sharp tabled in the Commons a background paper for his Tuesday night budget which also said:

See Stories Pages 16, 17

—The current upswing in the business cycle, which began in the spring of 1961, is showing signs of maturity. But there are still strong pressures moving the economy ahead.

—The $34,000,000 deficit, resulting from 1965-66 revenues of $7,673,000,000 and expenditures of $7,707,000,000, brings the net debt to $15,538,000,000 or $782 per capita compared with $794 a year ago.

—Wage rates advanced more rapidly than in 1964 but productivity gains were slower, meaning higher labor costs per unit of output.

—Expansion and growth now have become more dependent on improved productivity, avoidance of bottlenecks and upgrading the quality of both labor and capital plant and equipment.

OMITS GNP FIGURE

The review gave no final tabulation of gross national product—total value of all goods and services produced by the country—but said it is expected to be nine per cent higher than 1964's $47,003,000,000.

The white paper gave no hint as to what line of tax and spending policy Mr. Sharp may take in his budget. Its projections were based on existing tax rates.

"The economic climate changed during 1965 from one of moderate expansion in the early part of the year to one of boom at present," it said. "This change was brought about by the rapidly rising level of public and private investment superimposed on rising demands by consumers, governments and from exports."

There now was little if any slack in the economy and further expansion would depend on improved use of the country's capacity as well as its steady growth. In addition to the big increase in capital investment forecast for 1966, there would be continued increases in spending by all levels of government and business and consumers.

"The productive facilities of the Canadian economy now are close to their maximum rate of utilization, and the present and anticipated rate of expansion in demand appears likely to strain the resources currently available to meet it."

As to prices, the report said: " . . . Current upward price trends could well persist, unless significant productivity improvements emerge to add to the supply capability of the economy or unless the rate of increase in demand should turn out to be notably lower than currently expected."

It added that conditions early in 1966 suggest "it would not be prudent to assume a rate of price increase any less than that recorded in 1965." At the end of 1965, the consumer price

Estimated budgetary deficit of $34,000,000 in 1965-66 fiscal year, down sharply from $300,000,000 forecast last April and lowest deficit in nine years.

Booming economy expected to continue in high gear this year.

Gross national product—total value of all goods and services produced—estimated nine per cent higher in 1965.

Further drop in unemployment predicted for 1966; high labor demand to be partly met by more married women and retired persons taking part-time work.

Revenues $7,673,000,000 and expenditures $7,707,000,000, both up seven per cent from 1964-65.

Surplus of $240,000,000 in old age pension operations, cut to $215,000,000 after paying off temporary treasury loan.

Net national debt up $34,000,000 in year at $15,538,400,000; per capita debt down $12 at $782.

Tip Saves 2 Drivers In Truck Hijacking

THESSALON, Ont. (CP) — The lives of two truck drivers were saved early today when hijackers, who had kidnapped them, tipped off police to their whereabouts.

The two, Kris Miske, 42, of Vancouver, and David Lukiv, 39, of Coquitlam, were found shivering and shackled to a bannister in a deserted dance hall on Highway 17 near here. Thesstlon is 50 miles east of Sault Ste. Marie.

They had been left there handcuffed to the bannister for two days after three gunmen hijacked their tractor-trailer loaded with $180,000 in cigarettes. There was no trace of the transport, owned by D. S. Scott Transport Ltd. of Vancouver.

DEBATE MAY EXTEND BEYOND MONDAY

Close Vote Certain on Death Penalty

By MICHAEL GILLAN

OTTAWA (CP) Two full days of Commons debate indicate that any vote on abolishing the death penalty will be won or lost by a hair.

In 27 speeches by MPs up to Thursday night, 13 are in favor of outright abolition, 12 want it retained for most offences now covered and two can be classified as undecided—at least until a vote is held.

The government has set aside three days for debating the issue, and with more than 80 members initially intending to speak there is no certainty there will be a vote Monday, the final scheduled day for the debate.

Today has been set aside for an interim money supply bill and some minor government measures.

Many strongly-worded speeches have been delivered against the resolution to scrap capital punishment but nobody has moved amendments so far.

The government is expected to postpone any decision about extending the debate until Monday shows whether a vote on the resolution will be taken. Any resolution would be followed by a bill to make any changes law.

FREE VOTE PLEDGED

Prime Minister Pearson several months ago pledged a free vote on the issue, enabling a debate without party positions being taken.

The resolution, which substitutes a mandatory life sentence for hanging, was sponsored by four MPs in three parties. It would require the federal cabinet to approve any parole for a lifer.

At present planned and deliberate murders—capital murders—are punishable by death. But the Pearson government has commuted to life imprisonment 20 of these sentences since taking office in 1963. The Diefenbaker government had commuted three in a row before leaving office.

Non-capital murder, defined as all murders not planned and deliberate, is punishable by life imprisonment.

Abolitionist MPs tend to argue that the death penalty is not a deterrent, that hanging is a calculated killing repugnant to a supposedly-civilized society and that there is always the danger an innocent man will be executed.

Retentionists said it is uncertain whether the noose acts as a deterrent to potential murderers, that society is turning soft on criminals and that the state has a divine right to kill those who deliberately kill others.

"Only the rope can put an end to the bloody ambitions of some men," said Auguste Choquette (L—Lotbiniere).

"Should we make it easier for contract killing?" asked Jack Horner (PC—Acadia).

"These are not schoolboys we are fooling around with," said Gerald Laniel (L — Beauharnois-Salaberry).

Less adamant about his retentionist views, Heath Macquarrie (PC—Queens) said that after a great deal of thought he has reluctantly decided he is a "non-dogmatic but convinced retentionist."

He said he didn't want to take the chance of abolishing the death penalty and rejected arguments that abolition is necessarily a sign of a civilized society.

MAKES MAIDEN SPEECH

For the abolitionists, Gerard Pelletier (L—Montreal Hochelaga) drew the most attention and applause as he delivered his first speech since his election last Nov. 8.

"It's no innovation to abolish the death penalty," said the former Montreal newspaper editor. "We would be merely completing something our fathers and grandfathers started a long time ago."

The mentally ill were no longer slain now that society was able to treat this illness and protect itself, he said.

R. G. L. Fairweather (PC—Royal), former New Brunswick attorney-general, described how his family had shared the "final agony" as his father, a Supreme Court justice in New Brunswick, had to impose a death sentence.

His father abhorred capital punishment and was "repelled by the defeat of society," Mr. Fairweather said.

CRIME RATE GROWS

Seven of the 12 retentionist MPs were from Quebec. Several talked about a growing crime rate and spoke of a fear that abolition would encourage organized crime.

Martial Asselin (PC—Charlevoix) said the number of murders in Quebec has doubled in the last five years. He thought the present law adequate but suggested that the gas chamber should be substituted for hanging.

Alexis Caron (L—Hull) said abolition would help gangsters. Pious supporters of abolition were playing into the hands of criminals in the same fashion as they unintentionally aided organized gangs by bringing about prohibition.

Jack McIntosh (PC — Swift Current-Maple Creek) said a government has a divine right to defend society in wartime and from murderers.

Divine authority had two laws about killing—one forbidding an individual to murder, another permitting the state to kill in order to defend society.

Another personal view was put forward by Harold Winch (NDP—Vancouver East), who witnessed a hanging 30 years ago when a member of the B.C. legislature.

'SOMETHING TO SEE'

It was "something to see"—the "gurgling and the sighing that came up from down below" the trap, he said. He supports abolition.

The only party leader to enter the debate so far, Creditiste chief Real Caouette said he will oppose the resolution unless the government gives an assurance that the death penalty will be retained for certain crimes.

But his party colleagues could vote as they wish.

Mr. Caouette said responsibility for final decision on executions should be turned over to the provinces—some provinces can hang if they want and others wouldn't have to.

Monday will probably show whether the prime minister and Opposition Leader Diefenbaker—the two Commons members who have had the ultimate decision on whether to commute or let a man be hanged—will enter the debate.

Mr. Diefenbaker, prime minister from 1957 to 1963, asked Wednesday whether Mr. Pearson planned to speak. The prime minister replied that he wanted to hear some of the debate before deciding whether to participate.

Unlike the 1960 debate on capital punishment, which did not produce a vote, the spectators galleries have only been sparsely filled and attendance of MPs at times had dropped almost down to the quorum minimum of 20.

BOYCOTT CALLED OFF

Park Development Sharing Proposed

Recreation and Conservation Minister Kenneth Kiernan Thursday told the legislature he had resumed talking to Northern Affairs Minister Arthur Laing.

He wrote the federal minister the previous day offering to share development costs for Garibaldi Park near Vancouver but not if it involved turning over the provincial title to Ottawa.

He also indicated that he thought the federal government would be better advised to purchase private land to establish a national seashore park and suggested one parcel of 400 acres with 3,000 feet of waterfront on the Sechelt Peninsula could be bought for $250,000.

The letter reversed Mr. Kiernan's statement to the legislature several weeks ago. He said then he would never talk or write to Mr. Laing again until the federal government gave B.C. a copy of the legal brief it will present to the Supreme Court of Canada reference on its claims to jurisdiction over off-shore mineral rights.

BREECH OF FAITH

Mr. Kiernan said Mr. Laing gave him a commitment more than two years ago that he would forward a copy but it was never fulfilled. He said it was a breach of faith he would not forgive.

In his letter, Mr. Kiernan repeated the charge of a broken promise but added "there is no point in belaboring this matter and as far as I'm concerned, the episode is closed."

The remainder of the letter was a reply to Mr. Laing's public offer last fall of $10 million for Garibaldi development if it was turned over to be a national park.

MINERALS HEARING STARTS IN NOVEMBER

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal-provincial dispute over ownership of the offshore mineral rights will come before the Supreme Court of Canada in November, it was learned Thursday.

All the provinces but Quebec and Saskatchewan have agreed to put forward their arguments to the nine justices, who have been asked by Prime Minister Pearson to rule on the multi-million-dollar question.

Both the federal and provincial governments claim jurisdiction over oil and mineral deposits under the sea. Both have been issuing licences for exploration to oil companies.

By this time Mr. McGeer had re-entered the chamber and Mr. Strachan repeated his accusation that he was not a "disinterested party" and entered the debate improperly.

OWNS SHARES

Mr. McGeer (who later told reporters he owned some shares in Western Mines) said he had earlier put himself on record as opposed to any mines in provincial parks.

"When I rose to defend the government, the point I made was a point of scientific information," he said.

"The leader of the Opposition, in my opinion, misled the house and when I closed my remarks I said there were better reasons for opposing mining in the parks.

"The leader of the Opposition, by his imputation, has not added to the dignity and decorum of this house."

All through the debate, MLAs snapped angrily at each other and at one point Mr. Strachan said the government "is so jumpy and so nervous about this because we've cut close to the bone."

David Barrett (NDP—Dewdney) and Recreation and Conservation Minister Kenneth Kiernan angrily berated each other as Mr. Barrett demanded to know if scientific testing of copper sulphate's potential harm to the lake had been or would be undertaken.

BADGERED

Mr. Kiernan protested he was being repeatedly badgered on the same points.

He said the fish and game branch and pollution control branch would first have to approve dumping of mine tailings into the lake before the parks branch would even consider the company's application for permission.

Mr. Kiernan also said that in regard to the copper sulphate — if that is the chemical used by the company in its process — he would give assurance that:

Either it will not be dumped in the lake, or if it is dumped in the lake it will be after reasonable certainty that no harm will result, or, if it is dumped and found detrimental to lake life the company will have to find another method of disposing of mine tailings carrying it.

MAKE TESTS

Water Rersouces Minister Ray Williston said his pollution control board would make tests in the lake before copper sulphate is used or mine tailings are permitted to be dumped in the lake.

Randolph Harding (NDP—Kaslo-Slocan) said that last year the legislature was not informed that a road would be needed throught the park to service the mine "but now we are told that it is logical and you add this and you add that — retreating step by step — until we wind up dumping tailings into the lake."

CHANGED HANDS

Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) said Western Mines recently changed hands for $193,000, which "would have been a trifling sum to save Strathcona as a wilderness park."

Mr. Macdonald accused Mr Kiernan of misleading the legislature at the last session that huge sums would be needed to buy out Western Mines in order to stop the development.

"We lost our chance to save Strathcona last session by not spending what amounts to a piddling sum in the government's budget and future generations will rue the day," he said.

The debate was sidetracked numerous times into shouting matches, arguments over procedure and lengthy speeches before Mr. Kiernan's salary vote of $32,870 was passed.

index was 2.9 per cent higher than a year previous.

Personal savings rose to $3,098,000,000 in 1965 from $2,181,000,000 in 1964, doubling the figure of five years ago. "Part of the increase was due to a higher level of farm incomes resulting from a succession of good crops and exceptional wheat marketings."

TAX TAKE RISES

Reviewing 1965-66 revenue and expenditure accounts, the white paper said personal income tax collections are up $46,700,000 to an estimated $2,150,000,000 from $2,103,300,000 in 1964-65. Corporation tax collections are up $86,200,000 to $1,610,000,000 from $1,523,800,000.

Sales tax collections rose by $180,400,000, or 15 per cent, to $1,385,000,000 from $1,204,600,000.

Total tax collections were up $465,200,000 to $6,832,000,000 from $6,366,800,000. Non-tax revenue such as post office income and return on investments brought total budgetary revenues for 1965-66 to $7,673,000,000, up $492,700,000 from $7,180,300,000 in 1964-65.

Defence spending, at $1,585,000,000, represented 21 per cent of total budgetary expenditures. It was 22 per cent in 1964-65.

The budgetary accounts do not include such funds as the old age security fund, which in the fiscal year now ending took in $1,163,000,000 and paid out $923,000,000 in $75-a-month pensions to everyone 69 or older.

RELIEF ON THE WAY

A four-man relief group, headed by veteran Alpinist Anton Hiebeler of Germany, was on the way up to establish contact.

The relief party carried food and batteries for radio sets of the climbing party, made up of four Germans and one Scotsman.

The relief party hoped to come near the summit by the comparatively easy west side route. But with temperatures nearing 40 below zero and the wind estimated at 100 miles an hour, even that venture involved deadly risk.

"It's hell up there," he said. "Not enough ropes and things. Not all of us can go to the top."

Reports Navy Misbehaved Mystifying to Commodore

HALIFAX (CP) — Commodore John C. O'Brien, senior Canadian naval officer afloat, says Brazilian newspaper reports that Canadian sailors misbehaved during visits to that country last month are "a complete mystery" to him.

"We've never met anything like it before," he said today. "It's particularly mystifying because the general atmosphere at the Brazilian ports we visited was extremely friendly."

Commodore O'Brien made this comment to reporters who questioned him on his arrival here aboard the aircraft carrier Bonaventure, flagship of a 13-ship task group that called at West Indies and South American ports on a winter training cruise.

The 73-day trip was the biggest fleet exercise for the navy since the 1950s. Almost 4,000 men took part. Four West Coast ships were included in the task group. Bonaventure left Halifax Jan. 12.

GET WARM WELCOME

Commodore O'Brien said Brazil's government leaders and naval commanders gave the Canadians a warm welcome. The Brazilian navy rationed water to its ships so that the Canadian vessels could have ample supplies.

He said the number of "incidents" involving Canadian sailors ashore in Brazil was no more than expected when up to 3,000 men get leave. Visits to Uruguay, Argentina, Puerto Rico and Trinidad produced no published criticism.

The fleet spent 55 days at sea and 18 days in various ports for maintenance and recreation. East Coast units steamed a total of 15,304 miles. West Coast ships will have logged 20,589 miles by the time they reach Esquimalt, B.C., April 7.

The task group commander said the value of southern training cruises in winter was confirmed by this year's exercise. Working in warmer waters away from North Atlantic storms made it possible for the navy to do almost a year's training in a few months.

"The exercise has been most successful in maintaining our high state of combat readiness," Commodore O'Brien said.

How fast is fast?

and while you're at it, give the 60 & 80 a go, (they're new too)

By the time you've got the throttle only part way open, you'll have a pretty good idea of just how fast the Evinrude 100 really is. And you'll wonder why a motor like this one was never introduced before. You see, this is a new kind of high performance outboard. It antiquates the theory that you've got to make a motor monstrously high, and let's face it, homely; to get the kind of action you find in every Evinrude 100.

The Evinrude 100 is the product of the industry's most sophisticated engineering. Instead of making it bigger, Evinrude used the complex method of exhaust tuning to bring out the high power today's boating requires. It took the most advanced computers to work out the formula and the effect of this tuning is the same as super-charging—without the mechanical complications. The result: reduced back pressure, a remarkable step-up in combustion efficiency, more torque, faster acceleration, higher speeds, more miles per gallon than ever before with any high horsepower motor.

And a few other benefits accrue, also. Being a V4, the Evinrude 100 is gentle to your boat. This hundred-horse motor won't shake the transom off. And it's quiet because it's sound-sealed to the water line.

See the new Evinrude 100 and the two other V4 outboards—the 60 and 80 at your Evinrude Dealer's now. There are 15 motors in the Evinrude line for 1966, and he's got them for you to see. Also, OMC stern drive units: 90, 120, 150 and 200 hp. models.

All Evinrudes use a 50-1 gas/oil mixture, which increases engine life, saves wear and expense. And every Evinrude carries a full 2-year warranty.

NOW DO YOU BELIEVE? This picture is described as showing two flying objects above lights near Ann Arbor, Mich., on March 16. Washtenaw County deputy David Fitzpatrick said he made the picture with a small camera at 5:30 a.m., using a 10-minute exposure and that he and other deputies watched the objects more than two hours. (AP Wirephoto.)

SCORES REPORT SIGHTINGS

Man Shoots at Strange Object

By United Press International

Scores of persons, police and civilians, reported seeing the mysterious objects Thursday night in widely scattered sections of the U.S.

A Bangor, Maine, man told authorities he fired his pistol at a glowing object — and hit it.

"I could hear the elderberry bushes scraping as the thing came toward me," said John King, 22. He said he fired four times and the object, he said it was about 60 feet long, zoomed skyward.

Police said King was visibly distraught when he related the incident to them.

The reports began a week ago in the midwest, and from there have come the most numerous reports of sightings — more than 200 persons say they saw mysterious objects since Sunday. Four squad cars of deputies watched one for 45 minutes Thursday night in the Ann Arbor, Mich. area.

A truck driver told police in Niles, Mich., that a strange blinking object shadowed his truck for 15 miles early today.

The driver, Ralph Conte, Akron, Ohio, said the object had red, green and white lights and followed silently alongside his truck as he drove from Cassopolis, Mich., to Niles.

Conte told Berrien County deputies the object slowed when he slowed, blinked its lights when he blinked his, then finally veered away and vanished. Police said Conte obviously was serious.

Ben Bos, a Holland, Mich., businessman, told police he saw a strange object resembling a rainbow hover over a park area below his home. It appeared Wednesday night and again Thursday morning, he said.

The mysterious night-flyers were spotted Thursday near Trinidad, Colo., not far from the buried $88 million North American Air Defence command post. Louis di Palo, a local postman, said he watched three of the objects through binoculars.

Usually, the objects are described as being shaped like a child's top or a cigar. Descriptions of the Michigan objects have been the most detailed. Residents there said the object was metal with a waffled texture, topped with a hemisphere and sporting antennae and running lights.

Girl Injured In Car Mishap

A 16-year-old girl was treated and released from St. Joseph's Hospital Thursday morning following a traffic accident near Blanshard and Douglas.

Pedestrian Miss Therese Caaze, 1190 Nibbs, received bruises to her right eye and cuts to her knees.

Police said she was crossing Blanshard from west to east when in collision with an auto driven north on Blanshard by Evelyn G. Ennis, 1309 Vining.

Quebec Servants Take Pay Offer

QUEBEC (CP)—The threat of a strike by Quebec's 25,000 civil servants ended late Thursday when they voted to accept pay increases totalling more than $30,000,000 in a two-year contract.

About 15,000 members of the Provincial Civil Servants Union (CNTU) took part in a vote held in centres across the province. About 65 per cent favored scrapping plans for today's strike action.

The contract was the first approved by the union and the provincial government since civil servants were given the right to unionize and strike under the Public Employees Act, passed last year. Negotiations have been going on since last September.

The pay increases will be spread over the two-year contract period. The government had earlier offered $15,000,000 in raises.

Laborers employed by the government will receive a seven-cent hourly pay boost for their 48-hour, five-day week and an annual bonus payment averaging $163.

The government also granted, conditionally, implementation of the Rand formula which had been sought by the union. It provides that all civil servants must pay union dues whether they choose to belong or not. It is to be instituted as soon as the union proves it represents 70 per cent of those eligible for membership.

Odd Ministerial Advice

TRADE MINISTER LOFFMARK has announced that he was misunderstood when he urged, a few days ago, that British Columbia should unite in an economic and customs union with Washington, Oregon and California. He says that he made this proposal in full loyalty to Canada and without any intent to "prejudice Canada's sovereignty and independence."

Mr. Loffmark's profession of loyalty must, of course, be accepted at full value. But his claim to be offering intelligent suggestions for Canada's betterment must be dismissed as nonsense. It seems to be Mr. Loffmark's fate to be "misunderstood" almost every time he speaks in public. Yet his record of public utterances has a persistent pattern of ideas which cannot be interpreted in any other way than as harmful to Canada's unity and sovereignty.

He had hardly taken office when he adopted a British Columbia-versus-Canada attitude that has been maintained with few lapses ever since. He saw the sinister interests of eastern Canada as working for British Columbia's downfall. He claimed that the federal government's treatment of this province was leading the cabinet to think in terms of separation from Canada. Last summer he urged that all tariff barriers between Canada and the United States be removed, even though there might be a "risk of political domination by the Americans". He didn't think such domination would occur; but "even if it did," he told a Vancouver audience at that time, "it wouldn't be the end of the world".

Mr. Loffmark said this, of course, to use his words of last Wednesday, in the role of "as loyal a Canadian as any", and without doing "anything even indirectly that would prejudice Canada's sovereignty and independence".

But last week, British Columbia's trade minister went even farther. In advocating a customs union with the neighboring American states he proposes in effect to break up Confederation for no other reason than that it might raise our standard of living a trifle. And, of course, there would be the added advantage that it would provide Washington, Oregon and California with our natural resources at the lowest possible cost so that industries in those states might flourish.

Mr. Loffmark didn't say he would break up Confederation. He seems, inexplicably, not even to understand that this would be the inevitable result of the move he urges. For one measure of a nation's identity is that all parts of the country must present a single economic front to outside nations; and there can be no customs barriers between the various internal parts of the country.

Mr. Loffmark would have no tariffs between British Columbia and Washington. But what would this do to our relations with the rest of our country? Obviously, there would have to be customs officers on the B.C.-Alberta border to prevent Washington goods entering that province, where Canadian tariff levies would be in effect. British Columbia would inevitably be cut off economically from the rest of Canada by such an arrangement. Equally inevitably, there would be further estrangements arising from the situation.

Mr. Loffmark casually dismisses the thought that United States political influence would accompany United States economic influence in British Columbia, or that such influence would almost unavoidably become domination. He can take this attitude comfortably, of course, since after all, "it wouldn't be the end of the world".

But it would be the end of British Columbia as we know it, as an integral part of Canada. And it would be the end of Canada as we know it: a sovereign nation stretching from sea to sea.

It is incredible that a minister of the Crown can make such statements in public. It is incredible that Social Credit Premier Bennett, whose appointee and colleague Mr. Loffmark is, should continue to permit his minister to voice such nationally suicidal beliefs.

Mr. Bennett owes it to himself and to the people of British Columbia to dissociate himself completely from the rash and heedless utterances of his trade minister. This is a Canadian province, the people in it are Canadians, and they want to remain so.

Wasting the Best?

A DIPLOMATIC SILENCE MAY engulf the criticism of the role of North American public school principals voiced here by Mr. Donald Lindsay, but there will be tacit agreement with his position.

Mr. Lindsay, headmaster of Britain's Malvern College, one of the country's well known public schools, is amazed that principals are removed from teaching in many institutions on this continent.

"How," he asks, "can a headmaster influence anyone if he is only a voice through a loudspeaker?"

This is his way of questioning the use of competent, senior personnel in administrative offices, removing them from the classroom and making them directors rather than participating captains of the teaching teams in a school.

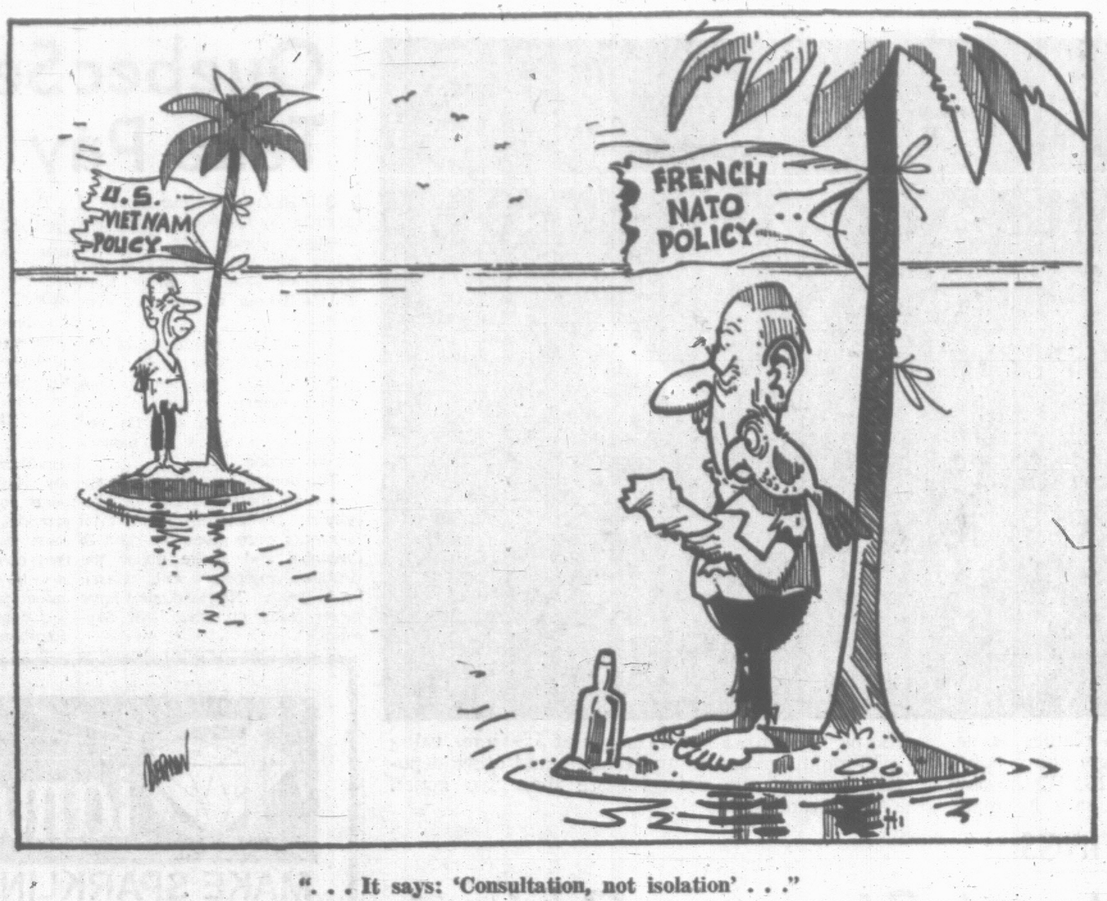
The best paid and most authoritative job is that of principal. When the school is large and is part of a well-organized school district, the administrative tasks of a principal make it difficult, if not impossible, for him to give much time to teaching. A teacher may remain in the classroom if he wishes, but the result is often that by so doing he foregoes promotion to the highest post, with its correspondingly high reward. His economic interests are usually served by accepting advancement, even if he would prefer to retain direct contact with his students as a teacher and to exercise the pedagogical abilities and skills which brought him recognition in the educational field.

Eventually, it is reasonable to suppose, enough specialists in school administration will be developed through particular training — and adequate adjustments will be made in salaries — both to staff schools with non-teaching administrators and retain good teachers for teaching. In the meantime, the individual can ill-afford to ignore the benefits of being made principal, even if the process removes him from most, if not all, of his teaching duties. But many a principal will agree with the British educationist.

Not Quite So Hostile

NO PEACE WAS EFFECTED between Israel and Egypt by Abie Nathan's flight from the one country to another in an old biplane. Fellow Israelis are inclined to regard Mr. Nathan as a publicity-seeker.

But there is one little element in the bizarre flight which commands attention. Abie landed out of gas at Port Said—and found a hospitable welcome from Arabs there. This surprises and delights the Israelis—and brings home a point that should be obvious. People have a more friendly look when you're not sighting them along the barrel of a gun.



"... It says: 'Consultation, not isolation' ..."

FROM LONDON By MARTIN DEWEY

Is Europe's Door Open or Closed?

Dewey

"ONE encouraging gesture from the French government, which I welcome, and the Conservative leader rolls on his back like a spaniel." So said Prime Minister Wilson last Friday in one of his more telling election campaign jibes at Edward Heath. But it would be much truer to say: "One enigmatic sentence from a second rank French official and the entire British nation starts chasing its tail ..."

That single sentence, spoken in an aside last Tuesday during a meeting in London of the Western European Union, was this: "I take this opportunity to express the wish that some day Britain will join this enterprise (the European Economic Community) once the necessary conditions are met." Some day. Necessary conditions. If the cloudy utterances did in fact mark a dramatic turning point in Anglo-European relations, no one at the seven-nation conference seemed to think so at the time. Most delegates appeared to feel that the French were merely making nice noises at Britain as a means of winning some support in the French-inspired NATO crisis.

Unimpressed

According to reports the Dutch, at any rate, left the meeting feeling that British chances of entering the Common Market had not improved at all. Even the British delegate, Foreign Secretary Michael Stewart, seemed ready to let the remark pass. It was only the next day, after the French delegate had referred to the matter again, that he bothered to mention it at a press conference. Even then he appeared to treat it all as an interesting development rather than an earth-shaking one.

"It was clear," he told reporters, "that France does believe it would be desirable for Britain to be a member of the EEC, and that does seem to me to be a healthier situation than that which existed in 1963." Which isn't saying very much if it is remembered that in 1963, when General de Gaulle vetoed Britain's entry application, Anglo-French relations reached a new low. Even so, it was enough for Britain's pro-European press. The Liberal Guardian reported Mr. Stewart's remarks under a front page headline saying: "De Gaulle Ends Ban on Entry Into Europe." Other newspapers also reacted as if General de Gaulle had suddenly fallen at the Labor government's feet in tearful supplication.

Heath Off and Running

From that moment, there was no turning back. Mr. Heath, who emerged paradoxically as the hero of Britain's failure to enter the community three years ago, quickly announced that a Conservative government would immediately make a new application and that it would iron out any differences with the six once the Treaty of Rome had been safely signed. The important thing, he indicated at a rush news conference, was that Britain's attitude must now be enthusiastic and unequivocal.

The Liberals, old European hands themselves, immediately announced that they too would sign now and dicker later. But there was a crucial difference. They would throw their weight behind the Common Market five and against the Gaullist notion of a Community of sovereign states.

The Liberals charged that Mr. Heath's recent expression of sympathy for France's anti-American posture in the current NATO crisis meant that the Conservatives would take the Gaullist line inside Europe. According to the Liberal campaign spokesman, Lord Byers, Mr. Heath had joined "Europe's most disruptive anti-American force."

The striking feature of the Conservative and Liberal approach was that neither party had any time for dusty questions about whether the French veto really had been lifted, about the political future of the European Community and its place in the Atlantic alliance, about Britain's relations with the Commonwealth and the European free trade area, or even about the effect of Common Market membership on the country's import bill and the balance of payments. All these were thrust aside in the competition to find the shortest possible route into Europe. As the London Times commented, the dead duck of British politics had suddenly started to quack.

Mr. Wilson, who had been daintily steering clear of the Common Market issue, felt obliged to put the government's position on record Friday night during a speech at Bristol. The result was a masterpiece of campaign oratory that left everyone, Conservatives, Liberals and government supporters alike, wondering what the devil the prime minister had said.

No Crawl-In

On the one hand, he seemed to want to lead Britain into Europe: "Given a fair win, we will negotiate our way into the Common Market, head held high, not crawl in. And we shall go in if the conditions are right." In the next breath, however, he seemed bent on ensuring that the conditions never could be right. Completely rejecting the levy arrangement that lies at the heart of the Common Market's agricultural system, he insisted also that Britain must remain free to go on buying food and raw materials in her traditional markets—Canada, Australia, New Zealand and other Commonwealth countries. This was bad enough.

For Mr. Wilson was really saying that there could be no bending on the one issue which would be central to the very negotiations he was so willing to undertake. But it was only the beginning. As if determined to alienate the five Common Market nations that have been pressing for British entry, he went on to reject "any idea of supranational control over Britain's foreign and defence policies." Britain is in Europe," he said, "but our power and influence are not, and must never be, confined to Europe."

Different Receptions

It is legitimate to ask after all this, whether Mr. Wilson was just trying to say no while giving the appearance of saying yes. Whether his objections were legitimate is beside the point. The important thing is that, while the opposition parties—perhaps foolishly—would he willing to sign the Treaty of Rome and negotiate later, Mr. Wilson has gone to the opposite extreme. The French liked his speech, it appears, but to everyone else it fairly reeked of Mr. Wilson's well known hostility to the European idea.

Two questions now promise to brood over the election campaign until next Thursday's voting. Was the remark of the French delegate at the meeting really intended by General de Gaulle to indicate that the door to Europe was finally open? And, if it was, has Mr. Wilson decided on the basis of his own personal views and suspicions to alter the course of contemporary British history by shutting it again?

Our Old New Headlines

We have news of wars and rumors of wars and perplexity of nations — today's headlines written over a thousand years ago in Luke 21, which also prophesied the restoration of Israel as the budding fig tree (Jeremiah 24). — Miss E. France, Sidney.

Like the Trial of Jesus

I have just finished reading "The Horsburgh Affair," written by Rev. R. C. Smeaton. Everyone who accused and condemned this man from twisted reports should read the true facts behind the case. How akin his trial was to Jesus's!—Dorothy Robe, 2461 Hazel.

Let's Not Be Ridiculous

Pet cemeteries, what next?

I would like to see it made mandatory that for every dollar spent on burial plots and headstones for animals—and it will come to this—one dollar must be given to charity for humans. I love animals, but let's not be ridiculous.—(Mrs.) Phyllis Daw, Box 643, Sidney.

Conservatively Free

On Page 5 of the March 23 Times, there is a fine analysis of the backgrounds of Alberta and B.C. legislators, which notes that some are members of a "radical sect" called Evangelical Free Church.

Evangelical Free Church is not radical, but theologically conservative. It adheres strongly to the well known doctrines of the dependability of the Bible, the deity of Christ, and the necessity of personal faith, but is equally flexible in minor doctrinal matters.—C. Lloyd Mackey, Pastor, Parkdale Evangelical Free Church.

Just Dreadful

I have read about the professor who wrote that nasty word on the backboard. I think it's dreadful, just dreadful. What else did he say?—Gladys Nemonier, Twin Maples, V.I.

Proper Clean-up

Ottawa Le Droit

One can understand ... how Justice Minister Lucien Cardin in a moment of anger started the Munsinger affair. It was a human reaction, but it is not easy to approve such a move which opens the door to other gestures of the same kind which, multiplying, could end by destroying parliamentarianism and killing the population's entire confidence in democracy.

As long as the Erik Nielsens afflict Parliament with their presence, everything is to be feared and each generation can produce its own. The danger is therefore permanent.

To get rid of it, the justice minister should right away have re-opened in secret all doubtful files lying dormant with the RCMP, if there are any. These files should especially include those of parliamentarians, no matter what party they are from. Then, let him submit the files to department legal advisers, destroying those which have no reason for existence and taking legal action against anyone whose past justifies it.

Without a cleanup of this kind, Parliament and other legislative bodies in Canada will always be able to shelter undesirables whose actions in broad daylight, by accident or for political vengeance, will put in peril the administration that one wants kept healthy at all levels. ...

FROM WASHINGTON By JOSEPH ALSOP

Restive in the Pentagon

Alsop

LIKE the usual cloud no bigger than a man's hand, the politics of the war in Viet Nam are already beginning to appear above the horizon. On the one hand, President Johnson has taken to representing himself as a stalwart rampart of "restraint," almost alone in holding off the dangerous designs of the military. This has become a standard turn, complete with Billy Graham organ-tones in the vox humana range, at large rallies like the recent governors' meeting in the White House.

The designs cited tend to be pretty hair-raising. One of them, reportedly, was to bomb the Chinese nuclear power plants. No one, of course, has even remotely suggested doing anything of that sort, unless the Chinese get into the Vietnamese war with both feet. Hence the news of these quasi-public Johnsonian image-polishings have not exactly promoted good feelings in the Pentagon.

Signs of Unrest

On the other hand, the military leaders are beginning to be manifestly restive, in the face of what someone has called the President's "image-warmaking." The restiveness is reflected in the recent demands for an air-blockade of Haiphong harbor by Senators Richard Russell, Stuart Symington and others who are close to the military leadership.

In reality, blockading Haiphong is fairly low on the priority list of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. But it must be noted that this low priority for Haiphong was authoritatively revealed in the course of the meeting which gave the strongest of all the recent hints of military restiveness. This was a background interview accorded to a group of correspondents by the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, General Earle Wheeler.

Oil-Fuel Targets

The reporters were told by General Wheeler that they could say that the Joint Chiefs of Staff wished to intensify the northern bombing by attacking the vital oil-fuel stores of North Viet Nam. They were also told that the chiefs attached far less importance to Haiphong harbor.

General Wheeler naturally did not speak for direct quotation; but as always happens in such cases, the highly significant identity of the spokesman for the Joint Chiefs of Staff is now an open secret. And the step that General Wheeler took was truly remarkable by current standards; for there has been no room for the old-fashioned free expression of the American military in the new Pentagon of Robert S. McNamara.

What, then, is all this churning really about? First of all, it is about the extremely detailed, indeed minute presidential management of many aspects of the war. The precedent was set in the Cuban missile crisis. This was a psychological-political confrontation of hideous gravity, but a confrontation in which there was no fighting. It was ideally managed, too.

It is extremely questionable, however, whether the Cuban precedent should be followed, at any rate to anything like the present extent, in the quite different present case. No matter how many cables he reads, the President cannot sense the true effect of this hesitation, that delay, this other veto on an unseen and ugly war halfway round the world.

Behind Wheeler Position

Yet the really major source of the present churning is something quite different. To find out its nature, it is only necessary to have a look at the Joint Chiefs' position on bombing the North Vietnamese oil-fuel depots, as formulated by General Wheeler.

To understand this position's real meaning, it is needful to bear in mind the long-range intelligence forecasts. These indicate a stepped up North Vietnamese invasion of South Viet Nam, which is expected to continue until our troops are fighting the equivalent of 18-plus divisions of enemy regulars, in addition to guerrillas and V.C. local forces.

These same forecasts indicated a stepped up North Vietnamese treaty violation, to deliver close to 6,500 tons per month through Laos to South Viet Nam. Without that tonnage, the divisions facing our troops will have no teeth — meaning ammunition. And this supply movement, calculated from ports across North Viet Nam, and down the Ho Chi Minh Trail to the South Vietnamese border, will require something like 10,000 trucks.

To Disrupt Supply

Naturally, then, the Joint Chiefs want to try to halt the trucks and cripple the supply movement by taking out the very vulnerable North Vietnamese oil-fuel stores. The Chiefs are going on the rule of doing what needs doing, which is always the necessary course in wartime.

If the intelligence forecasts prove correct, failing to do what so obviously needs doing will cost a shocking price, not only in Viet Nam, but also here at home. President Johnson should remember his hero, Franklin Roosevelt, who was not deterred from doing what needed doing by, for instance, threats of petulance in the "Chicago Tribune."

DENNIS THE MENACE

"... AND THEY KEPT CHANTING, 'WE WANT DENNIS! WE WANT DENNIS!' AND MR. WILSON HAD A ROPE! ...."

Looking Back

From The Times of March 25, 1906:

John J. Taylor, who suffered injuries to his spine when he was run over by a hay wagon recently, has transferred from the Jubilee Hospital to St. Joseph's, claiming negligence on the part of the Jubilee's staff. Taylor said he was placed in a stanchion and weights of 40 pounds were fixed to his feet, in which position he was left for two days. He told nurses and doctors he was feeling great pain but neither, he says would adjust the weighted boots. Hospital officials say Taylor was irritable and unco-operative and had struck a nurse on the nose.

URGE BAN ON STALIN BE KEPT

By VICTOR ZORZA
The Manchester Guardian

LONDON — Twenty-five eminent Soviet intellectuals have warned the Kremlin against rehabilitating Stalin.

This is the first attempt by informed public opinion to influence a major policy decision of the Soviet Party leadership since the heavy hand of totalitarianism has descended on the Soviet Union.

The letter of the 25, according to informed sources in Moscow, warned Leonid I. Brezhnev, the first party secretary, of the very serious risks implicit in any such rehabilitation. Articles in the Soviet press and speeches by some of the lesser Soviet leaders have recently dropped some hints that the highest Soviet leadership is debating the advisability of a partial rehabilitation of Stalin.

At the same time there have been indications that the Soviet leaders are deeply divided between the supporters of "progressive" and "conservative" policies, and that the debate about Stalin is merely the outward expression of this division.

An Intrusion

Thus the intervention of the 25 is not so much the taking of a stand on a historical issue as an intrusion into active politics, hitherto reserved for the party leadership.

Among the signatories of the letter are writers, scientists, Nobel prizewinners and winners of Lenin prizes and the former Stalin prizes for outstanding achievement in science and the arts—that is, representatives of the intellectual elite of the Soviet Union.

Their intervention is so drastic an action, in Soviet conditions, that it can have been taken only as a last resort. They must have therefore been prompted by the knowledge that the conservatives in the leadership were about to push through a formal decision in preparation for the party congress to be held at the end of this month.

Le Devoir on the Ottawa Crisis—2

'Unavoidable Conclusion' Must Be Drawn by Pearson

By CLAUDE RYAN

Discussing the crisis in Parliamentary affairs brought on by the Spencer case and the Munsinger affair in two signed articles, Claude Ryan, editor and publisher of Quebec's most influential newspaper, Le Devoir, came first to the conclusion that Justice Minister Lucien Cardin must be removed from government immediately. In his second article, published here today, Mr. Ryan looks at Prime Minister Pearson's role in government and decides—obviously regretfully since he has actively supported Mr. Pearson many times in the past—that the same course of action is indicated for him.

If the Canadian Parliament has become the grotesque theatre that one knows it to be, it's not because of the lack of intelligence or intellectual breadth of the man who presides over the fate of the government.

It would be just as far off the mark to accuse Mr. Pearson of arrogance. Never was a prime minister less pretentious, less vain of his supposed infallibility and his personal prestige. Never did a prime minister seem as spontaneously ready for dialogue.

Nevertheless despite his remarkable gifts and his long experience in public affairs, Mr. Pearson has shown himself inept in government. In the last few months he has made several deplorable decisions . . . He has shown in serious circumstances an astonishing lack of courage and solidarity. No one feels secure under his leadership any longer. How can this paradox be explained?

Prime Reason Lies in Past

A prime reason evidently lies in Mr. Pearson's past. The prime minister has been a diplomat, or a civil servant, almost all his life. However, there is a world of difference between a diplomat and a political leader.

The diplomat, as a general rule, applies a policy. When he participates in the elaboration of this policy, he does it on behalf of other men who in the end will have to take the responsibility for it before public opinion. When he seeks a solution, he works with representatives of other powers who have, each of them, their own national interests. This explains why the world of the diplomat is ideally one of nuances, compromises, grey solutions.

The political leader is, on the contrary, the man on whom falls the responsibility for defining and defending policies. Even if he has not been the actual father of the policies, he must shoulder the ultimate responsibility and defend them in the face of public opinion.

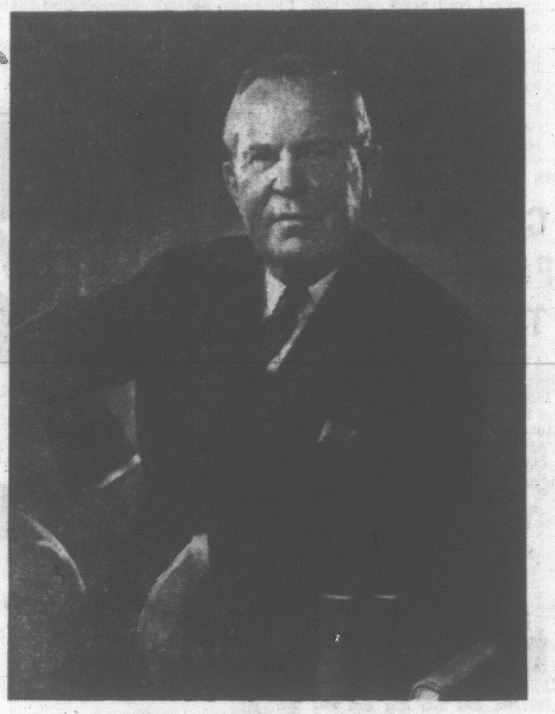
Moreover, our political system rests on the assumption that the leader, having been placed at the head of the machine, must avoid making mistakes, avoid going against the mechanism or impeding the operation of the system once it has been put into motion.

Everything indicates that this role does not at all suit a man who has been formed in he art of zigzag that characterizes the diplomatic service. As a public figure, Mr. Pearson is indecisive, unstable, changeable. In him the intelligent citizen and the subtle diplomat too often win out over the political man right in the middle of a tight battle.

A careful observation of Mr. Pearson's behavior also leaves the impression that the prime minister is a poor leader of men.

Not Really Team Man

Mr. Pearson has a jovial and sociable manner. To see him you would think him a great team-man. It is apparent such is not really the case. Right in the middle of difficult crises he freely consults the few men in his confidence. He consults them in such a way, that one often suspects him of too readily embracing their conclusions. During this time he keeps at a distance those colleagues whose opinion, even if disagreeable to hear, would be very useful to him.



PRIME MINISTER PEARSON
. . . 'with his own hand he has killed the myth'

The man stays astonishingly calm and detached when a storm breaks around him. But while with a little more vigor and prudence he could forecast the storm, he displays a nonchalance, a carelessness not worthy of a real leader.

Furthermore, Mr. Pearson is powerless to act decisively in cases which call for rapid decision.

Let us think, for example, of the Lamontagne affair, of the Favreau affair, of the Cardin affair. A good government leader would have realized the necessity of bringing such nonsense to a definite close. With Mr. Pearson, on the contrary, each affair goes on and on indefinitely. The prime minister hangs on to the man, not wishing to displease him. He doesn't dare show too much confidence in him, not wishing to ally himself too closely with him. He prolongs unnecessarily the ordeal of each one. And just the same he finishes by letting almost all of them fall, defeated.

Mr. Cardin said the other day that he had withdrawn his letter of resignation in order not to bring about Mr. Pearson's defeat.

Has in Truth Won Affection

This statement is very revealing. Despite his repeated errors, and the vacillation of his leadership, Mr. Pearson, has, in truth, won the affection of his members of Parliament and his colleagues. Nobody one knows detests this man. Some criticize him. Few fear him and fewer still hate him.

The phenomenon is no doubt rooted in the charm and the amiability of Mr. Pearson. In the general as in the particular, Mr. Pearson has been able to associate his name with a few great political objectives, dear to the hearts of most of the country's Liberals. Mr. Pearson is a true friend of civil liberties. He is, of all the English-speaking prime ministers Canada has had, the one who has shown the greatest understanding of the bicultural character of the country. He has, for the most part, the sympathy of the senior civil servants. He favors social progress. In foreign affairs he would incline to favor the reasonable course espoused by intellectuals.

This supply of goodwill and moral support which Mr. Pearson enjoys has up to now prevented his close helpers and supporters from raising brutal questions on the quality of his leadership. In the worst moments of crisis, the same thing is finally said: "Mr. Pearson is still by far the best man."

After three years of experience, we are convinced this beating around the bush has lasted long enough. By his paradoxes and contradictions, Mr. Pearson has led the government and Parliament into impotence. With his own hand, he has killed the myth that not so long ago was created around his name. There is nothing left for him now but to draw the unavoidable conclusion.

Quebec Meeting to Open Liberal Power Struggle?

By PETER C. NEWMAN

Newman

OTTAWA — When the federal wing of the Quebec Liberal Party called its founding convention for Quebec City this weekend, it was intended to be a somewhat routine gathering of French Canadian politicians, anxious to discuss their special problems as members of a federal party.

Instead, they may witness a far more entertaining spectacle: the initial sprint in the long race to succeed Lester Pearson.

All of the leading contenders for the Liberal leadership — Paul Martin, Mitchell Sharp, Robert Winters and Paul Hellyer — as well as a couple of "dark horse" contestants (Allan MacEachen and John Turner) will be attending the Quebec City meetings. making their first forays into the strange and complex world of French-Canadian politics.

Need Quebec

With support in the rest of the country scattered among them, each candidate knows he must gain a solid following among Quebec's delegation to the leadership convention, in order to be sure of nomination.

While none of the self-proclaimed heirs to Pearson's throne is expected to use his time in Quebec City doing anything as blatant as only wooing convention delegates, the occasion will give each minister a chance to display both his Berlitz French and his enlightened appreciation of Quebec's special place within Confederation.

The presence of the ministers is probably most significant in terms of what it indicated about Lester Pearson's hold on the Liberal party.

Not Important

Provincial association meetings are not usually considered important enough to warrant ministerial attention. Only last January, not a single senior minister volunteered to attend the annual convention of the Manitoba Liberal Association.

But curiously, seven of the cabinet's busiest ministers have suddenly found time to attend this weekend's Quebec City meeting. A situation that leaves very little doubt about the fact that Lester Pearson's term as leader of the Liberal Party is running out.

Following the Spencer-Munsinger mess it was generally agreed among Liberals in Ottawa that one more shoddy parliamentary performance would foreclose Pearson's stewardship.

Traditionally, the leadership of the Liberal Party is transferred by a sort of political osmosis which creates an environment for orderly succession, so that the actual leadership convention becomes little more than an occasion for paying homage to the new standard bearer.

But this time, no party consensus seems to be developing. It looks very much as though the picking of Pearson's successor will develop into a most un-Liberal power struggle.

USC's Dr. Lotta Visits Hong Kong

By JOHN KIRKWOOD
Times Far East Correspondent

HONG KONG — A dedicated Canadian woman whos job is literally to keep people alive passed through here recently to inspect areas where Canadian money is bringing new hope to poor people.

Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova, director of the Unitarian Services Committee, was here to find out personally how the money raised by Canadians in last year's nationwide USC appeal was being spent and to investigate future needs and special problems of the underprivileged citizens of Hong Kong.

Canadians in 1965 gave more than $960,000 to the USC, handsomely topping the target of $840,000.

Times Helped

Of this total $100,000 was raised by newspapers of the F. P. Publications group, of which The Times is a member.

Dr. Hitschmanova's visit here before she flew on to India typified the personal touch stressed by the USC in its operations.

Dr. Hitschmanova took tea in the tiny, overcrowded homes of needy Chinese families, listened to their problems, encouraged them to tell her their most pressing needs and always brough them the good wishes of the kind-hearted Canadians who are doing so much to help them.

"We always emphasize the personal touch," she explained.

"We're not just an agency raising money. We always want to express the good will and the concern of Canadians over needy people in different parts of the the world.

"We want to help people to help themselves and we consider it a privilege to be able to help them.

"This is why I always come and meet the poor people in person and talk to them, so they well understand that this is not just a business of dolars and cents but that the people in Canada are truly concerned about them.

"Our basic business, you see, is literally to keep people alive and this is a very human and personal business."

The reaction she receives when she meets the people in person is overwhelming.

"Usually they're a bit shy and reluctant to talk," Dr. Hitschmanova said.

"But really they're very eager to talk things over with me and once they've got over the shock of my uniform and overcome their shyness they tell me all about themselves — their children, how much money they have, how much they need to be able to feed and clothe their children and send them to school, all the essential things.

"And when they understand that part of their money is coming from people in Canada who are generous enough to give, then they're truly grateful and often they ask me to say thank you to the people when I go back home.

"It's a very touching and emotional experience and sometimes I think I must have the most emotional job in the world — the contrast of satisfaction in seeing a job well done and the challenge of the needs of the future."

Founded USC

Dr Hitschmanova, who was born in Czechoslovakia and emigrated to Canada in 1942, founded the USC herself in Ottawa in 1945.

Now the non-denominational volunteer rehabilitation agency has a paid staff of 14 in the Ottawa headquarters and 46 branches across Canada which are all staffed by volunteers.

In its operations in Hong Kong, Korea, India, Syria, the Ghaza Strip, Greece, Italy, Austria and France, the USC also aids educational, medical and vocational training programs, community development and family planning services.

Deserted by his army, this conniving Duke of Northumberland grovelled before Queen Mary, even offering to change to her religion. Pre-Election Session Is Hard on Ministers

By JOHN MIKA
Times Legislative Reporter

If the session lasts another week — as a growing number of MLAs think it will — the provincial government will face a rare necessity.

It will have to seek interim supply so that it can go on paying its bills and meeting the civil service payroll in the new fiscal year beginning next Friday.

Mika

The last time the government had to ask for temporary spending authority was in 1953 when Premier Bennett obtained permission to pay bills between the spring and fall sessions which straddled the run-off election that secured him in the power saddle.

This year, passage of the 17 departmental estimates may overlap the end of the 1965-66 fiscal year for four reasons. Already, Premier Bennett has begun muttering that the opposition is obstructing and dragging its feet but three of those reasons are his responsibility.

First, the premier delayed starting the session until Jan. 27, more than a week later than normal, which set back the whole timetable.

Higher Budget

Secondly, he introduced a massively higher budget of $652.2 million and a new system of itemizing the accounts, both of which demand a longer than normal consideration if the the opposition is to discharge its function conscientiously.

Thirdly, in a deliberate program that puzzled everyone, the premier departed from normal practice after the budget debate was concluded and insisted for days on end that the legislature deal with bills rather than estimates.

The fourth reason the house is approaching the end of the fiscal year without the end of estimates scrutiny in sight is that the opposition members — sensitive to the premier's constant election hints — have been going through cabinet ministers' appropriation requests with a finer-toothed comb in the hopes of finding material for the coming campaign.

Add up all four reasons and it looks very much as though the premier has set up the opposition for a charge of obstruction of his program.

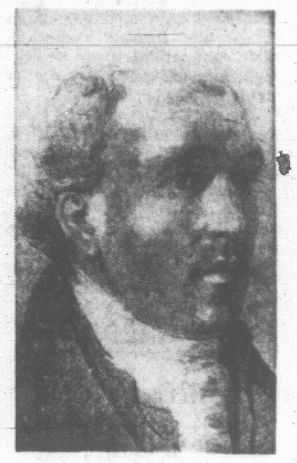
There is no doubt that the session has been tougher for the ministers. Agriculture Minister Frank Richter was denoralized by the unaccustomed grilling he received this year — seven hours instead of the usual one or two — and even veteran targets Attorney-General Robert Bonner and Education and Labor Minister Leslie Peterson have confessed it was a tough grind facing the opposition this year.

More ministers seem headed for the same extensive ordeal but already it appears that there is one who may never get over his drubbing.

That's Health Minister Eric Martin who, during 14 hours, was hit not only hard and often by opposition MLAs but was used as a punching bag even by Socred backbenchers to the extent that the premier personally had to shield him several times.

It has been known for some years that the Socred caucus was growing increasingly restive with Mr. Martin but the open display of hostility by a majority of applauding backbenchers who watched the minister take the drubbing raised the question of how much longer he can hang onto his portfolio — if he runs again for office.

Founders of B.C.



David Douglas

A common error is the assumption that the Douglas fir was named after the first governor of the mainland colony of British Columbia, Sir James Douglas. But the man whose name is perpetuated by the tree so vital to the west coast economy was David Douglas, one of the world's great botanists and explorers. David Douglas was born in Scotland in 1799. A bright student, he fell in love with botany. At age 24 he was chosen by the Horticultural Society to go abroad in search of specimens for London's Kew Gardens.

In Philadelphia he saw specimens collected by the U.S. Lewis and Clark expedition to the Pacific Northwest and he resolved to also explore those regions. He endured a 256-day trip around the Horn during 1824-25 and established a headquarters at Fort Vancouver on the Columbia River. He ranged east and north as far as the Rockies for two years, sending his specimens back to England where he soon was famous.

In 1834 Douglas went to Honolulu where he tumbled into a pit which had been dug to catch wild cattle — and a captive bull gored him to death. There was some suspicion that he had been pushed, but this was never proved. He died at the age of 35.

He was credited not only with making the first report on the Douglas fir but with the prophecy that it would bring wealth to the people who ultimately settled the Pacific coast. He was loved and respected by the Indians who claimed he drank boiling water, having watched him mix an effervescent beverage. And after seeing him light his pipe with a magnifying glass they revered him almost as a God.

5 PER CENT INCREASE FOR OUTSIDE STAFF

Victoria has settled its dispute with the Civic Employees Protective Association, Local 50.

At a council meeting Thursday afternoon the city agreed to pay its outside staffers 12 cents an hour across the board this year with a further 12 cents an hour increase in 1967.

The new contract will be for three years but can be opened by either side in 1968.

The first two years of the contract are binding on both sides.

An increase of 12 cents an hour for the outside side workers brings them into line with inside workers and city policemen who also accepted five per cent increases each year for two years.

The outside workers increase will cost taxpayers $190,000 over the two-year period.

City firemen are now the only major group of city employees still negotiating.

The firemen go to conciliation next week with the decision of the conciliation board binding.

Other employees such as carpenters and electricians negotiate separate contracts.

BUT . . . IS IT LEGAL?

City Bans Crest Use By Commercial Firm

Victoria council was divided Thursday on a recommendation from the finance committee that commercial firms be banned from using the city coat of arms on souvenirs.

Jeune Brothers had asked permission to use the official insignia of the city on tourist souvenirs.

Thursday's discussion on the touchy subject was the fourth council or council committees had engaged in on the request.

It was discussed by the finance committee and rejected.

Council later rejected the finance committee's recommendation and asked it to take a second look.

The committee did but saw no reason to change its stand.

On the vote Thursday council voted 5-3 to keep the coat or arms inviolate.

Aldermen Michael Griffin, Hugh Stephen and Robert Baird voted to give the Victoria-based company the go-ahead.

Ald. Lily Wilson, who voted against granting permission, said she felt some good had come of the suggestion.

"We have been looking for a long time to find some suitable gift to give visiting dignitaries," she said.

HOME GARDEN

Time Now To Sow Indoors

By HILDA BEASTALL

The end of March is the time to sow the seed of zinnias indoors if we want to have abundant blooming in late summer.

It can be disappointing to have plants full of buds when the first frosts of fall visit the garden, and the only way to avoid this condition is to try for earlier bloom.

Hilda

Zinnia seedlings are sometimes hard to raise indoors if we keep the soil too damp. A way out is offered by using small-size peat pots to overcome the need for moving the seedlings after germination.

Since the peat pots are mosture-holding, make the soil mixture two-thirds soil and one-third sand. Sow two to a pot, removing the weaker.

SUNNY WINDOW

A sunny window in a room which is not kept too hot at night will do in the early stages, followed by an unheated sunroom by the end of April. It will likely be towards the end of May before zinnias may be put out into their flowering positions.

Nature herself gives us clues to follow when pricking out of seedlings is required. Among batches of seedlings from a packet of seed labelled as mixed colors, we soon notice leaves of different shades of green

In the snapdragons this is most pronounced so that it is not difficult to prick out a balanced mixture of light and dark shades. One cannot be sure whether the dark, purplish green leaves will be dark reds, or orange, but at least they will be strong colors. The lighter green leaves belong to plants which will bear the white, yellow or pale pink blossoms.

LEAF SHADING

Among the petunias, this leaf shading is not so noticeable, but I find it works with lupins and to a lesser extent with aquilegias or columbines.

A packet of the best seed of double stocks, so desirable in the garden for their penetrating fragrance and their long-lasting qualities, usually carries the information that a small percentage of the seedlings will be singles. By selecting only the lighter green seedlings when grown at 50 deg. F., it is possible to have a planting of 100 per cent double flowers.

In connection with this business of double stocks, it is of interest to note that in the growing of seed for all-double stocks it is the plants with single flowers which bear the seed. The doubles bear no seed.

Sluggish Kidneys May Bring Restless Nights

If you "fight the pillow", toss and turn all through the night and don't really know why—perhaps here's news and help for you! One cause of such restlessness may be traced to sluggish kidney action. Urinary irritation and bladder discomfort may follow. The result can be backache and restless nights. This is when Dodd's Kidney Pills can help bring relief. Dodd's stimulate kidney action, helps relieve the irritated condition that causes the backache. Take Dodd's, and see if you don't feel better, rest better. Used successfully by millions for over 70 years. New large size saves money.

Council Takes Second Look At Multiple Dwellings Bid

In the face of mounting protests from residents of the area bounded by Hillside, Cook, Kings and Blackwood, Victoria city council will take another look at a proposal to rezone the area for multiple dwellings.

It had been proposed to rezone the area from R-2 (two family dwellings) to R-3 which would open the door for low-rise apartment blocks.

Residents complained that the introduction of apartments to the area would lower property values and soon turn the area into a slum.

Farmer's Construction has entered the lowest bid to construct office buildings above the arcade stores on Centennial Square.

The local company bid $49,615 for the project as against bids of $52,940 and $53,000 by others.

The work will see a second storey built on the existing building facing city hall plus an outside glassed staircase on Douglas Street.

Council has already earmarked $65,000 for the project, including architect fees.

Council will soon call for tenders for the removal of floodlighting poles and fences on the south side of Royal Athletic Park to make way for the general contractor who wins the contract to revamp the park.

Ald. Geoffrey Edgelow asked if the poles could not be left in to "provide some lighting for sports events" now that the city has lost the Babe Ruth World series.

The city has already agreed to spend $100,000 on new lighting for the park. Main purpose of the hurry to get the park in shape and the new lights installed was to accommodate the baseball series.

Council agreed to put $400 in the 1966 budget for a new movie screen for the McPherson Theatre.

In committee two weeks ago council was informed that many people renting the theatre to show movies had complained about the poor quality of the existing screen.

PNEUMONIA HER FORTE

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP)—Judy Lynn Funsch, who has had pneumonia 18 times in five years of life, remains in fair condition but with an improved appetite, doctors at the University of Michigan Medical Centre reported Thursday. The 28-pound blonde child underwent intricate heart surgery two weeks ago, and developed pneumonia.

PATHOLOGIST:

Shock Caused Child's Death

Shock probably induced by suffocation caused the death of Linda Crocker, a preliminary hearing was told in central court Thursday.

Pathologist Dr. Ross McNeely said the seven-year-old girl's skull was fractured.

Charged with capital murder in connection with the Feb. 10 slaying is Francis Ottley Wollaston, 16, of 734 Sea Drive.

Dr. McNeely testified he suspected "the child may have been close to death when her skull was fractured."

Earlier testimony revealed there were abrasions to her throat and neck and another across her stomach.

'TAMPERED WITH'

"I suspect the child had been tampered with but I don't believe there was any sexual assault," said the pathologist.

He termed the mark across her abdomen a scuff rather than a kick and stated it probably happened before death.

The girl's partially-clothed body was found Feb. 10 on a 16-foot high rock bluff in the Wallace Drive-Marchants Rd. area of Central Saanich.

Hugh Stanhope, 6838 Woodward Drive, said he found the child's body about 5 p.m. A search was started after she failed to return home from school.

"I bent over and felt her pulse. I put my head on her chest but I could detect no sign of life," he said.

CLOTH IN MOUTH

He added there was a piece of cloth in her mouth.

This was removed by Dr. I. F. Destrube who attempted artificial respiration, he said.

Central Saanich Constable John Gelling said a Valentine card found near her body bore the inscription: "love, Mommy and Daddy and it had 'Linda' on it."

Saanich Detective Charles Trueit said he and George Walton, another Saanich detective, accompanied Central Saanich Constable Ross Yuill to the Wollaston home about 8 p.m.

This was approximately two hours after the child's body was found.

Wollaston's next court appearance will be April 1 when April 12 will be fixed as a continuing date for the hearing.

Record Revenues In Manitoba

WINNIPEG (CP) — No new taxes were forecast Thursdty by Premier Duff Roblin as he brought down his 1966-67 provincial budget which emphasizes industrial development and record revenues.

The budge address to the legislature, delayed by Manitoba's flood preparations, predicts a $169,000 surplus and provides for some minor tax reductions despite record spending of $298,043,000.

No capital borrowing is anticipated and the provincial public debt will be reduced for the second consecutive year.

The 1966-67 revenue will include a $22,000,000 surplus. It consists of an estimated $7,000,000 operating surplus for 1965-66 plus a $14,900,000 actual surplus brought forward at the end of the 1964-65 fiscal year.

The reduction in taxes and fees — some previously announced — include removal of a five-per-cent tax on products used for residential heating; elimination of Grade 12 examination fees; reduction in registration fees on school buses; and an exemption of $1,000 on parimutuel taxes levied against agricultural societies holding harness races.

The total estimated revenue of $298,213,000 is up $52,916,000 from the 1965-66 estimates.

70 Entries For Regatta

More than 70 entries have been received for the Saanich Jubilee sailboat regatta Sunday at Elk Lake.

Anyone who wants to join the races can take out registration forms until 11 a.m. Sunday at Hamsterly Park, said Coun. Edward Lum of the Saanich Diamond Jubilee Committee.

Races start at noon.

FOUR-MONTH ABSENCE from public functions by Mao Tse-tung has Western experts in Hong Kong believing the Chinese leader is seriously ill. Some are speculating that China's operating hierarchy is debating major policy changes, including possible reapproachment with Moscow. They believe Mao may be deliberately staying aloof from that debate in order to re-emerge as the untarnished father-leader of Chinese communism once China's new policy is determined.

JOURNALIST EXPELLED

SALISBURY (AP) — British journalist James Biddulph, who has worked in Rhodesia for 10 years, was today declared a prohibited immigrant by the Rhodesian government and ordered to leave the country within a week.

The order also applies to his 26-year-old South African-born wife, Marie, and their three young children.

ENTIRE REGIMENT SMASHED

Viet Cong Suffer Heavy Losses

SAIGON (AP)—Five thousand U.S. marines and South Vietnamese troops claimed 1,236 Viet Cong soldiers killed or wounded in five days of battle that ended Thursday in the central coastal plains.

Senior officers said the campaign in Quang Ngai province, 330 miles north of Saigon, smashed an entire Viet Cong regiment, battered several more battalions and cleaned out five villages in an area long dominated by Communists.

Allied losses were described as light.

Today, other marines began a new operation to protect the rice harvest farther north near Da Nang.

Two Viet Cong companies opened upon the marines with mortar shells, inflicting some casualties, but officers said the Americans killed six Viet Cong.

Otherwise ground action was mostly static.

U.K. ELECTION

Racial Issue Simmers Under Surface

By LAWRENCE MALKIN

SMETHWICK, England (AP) —Britain's racial problems still simmer beneath the surface, but are not playing any prominent role in the campaign for next Thursday's general election.

This Birmingham suburb caused a national commotion in 1964 when some posters said: "If you want a nigger neighbor, vote Labor." Smethwick voters threw out the Labor member of Parliament, Patrick Gordon Walker, and elected Peter Griffiths, who opposed immigration by non-whites.

The British use "immigration" as the polite label for racial problems. Most of Britain's 600,000 Negroes, Pakistanis and Indians—about one per cent of the population—arrived here as immigrants after the war to alleviate a shortage in workers.

Immigration from the Commonwealth was first limited in 1962 by the then Conservative government, over bitter Labor opposition led by Gordon Walker. After Labor came to power, it put on stricter limitations—only 8,500 new workers allowed each year.

A race relations board was set up, a special minister put in charge of integration, and town councils encouraged to set up departments to deal with immigrants.

SHOWS LESS HOSTILITY

Newspaper clippings sampled by the private Institute for Race Relations show a marked decline in racially inflammatory statements since the new policy went into effect last August.

Conservative Leader Edward Heath, taking a strong stand against exploiting racial feelings, has warned Conservative candidates against having anything to do with racial discrimination.

In Smethwick, Griffiths and the local Conservatives switched their line several months ago to support of integration. But next door to Smethwick, in West Bromwich, race is still a delicate issue.

The Labor candidate is Maurice Foley, government minister in charge of integration. His Conservative opponent is George Hawkins, a town councillor who has worked for integration and welcomed Foley's government appointment last year.

In the campaign Hawkins has gone beyond the Conservative party and demanded a halt to all immigration. He at first accepted the help of the English Rights Association, which fights against "the continued degrading of our race." It is headed by Don Finney, who helped organize Griffiths' campaign in Smethwick last time.

The Conservative head office apparently put pressure on Hawkins. He dropped Finney. But he still refuses to pose for photographs canvassing a prospective Negro voter.

New Officers Elected By RCAF Group

RCAF Association, 800 Pacific Wing, has elected Clarence House, its new president.

Mr. House, last year's vice-president, succeeds Bill Stevenson.

Other new officers are George Aitchison, first vice-president; Cy Axhornr, second vice-president; Ora Collard, secretary, and Dave Titterton, treasurer. Executive members are Rex Collard, Bill Fry, Ken Lee, Alex Jardine, Zeta Christie, Clark Vanderwolf and Ken Cutler.

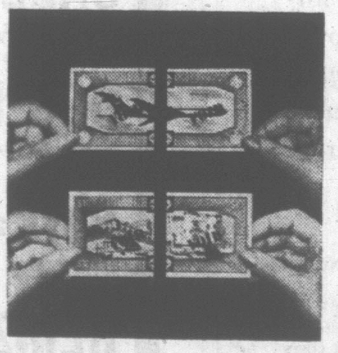
Every time you drive in to a Shell station you stand a chance to win cash or a holiday overseas. You could choose a lazy trip to Jamaica (left), tour fascinating Hong Kong (upper right), or have a fling in Paris (above).

Win a trip to Jamaica, France, Hong Kong or any one of 103 countries served by Shell



You could take off on a holiday overseas—or win money in cash—the very next time you drive in to a Shell station.

You'll fly in the new BOAC Super VC10—the world's most advanced long range jet-liner. Incidentally, practically every BOAC jet flies on Shell fuel.

How you can win

Every time you drive in to a Shell station, you'll receive a sealed envelope containing half a "Take Off With Shell" bill.

After you answer a skill-testing question correctly, you win two return tickets to your choice of any one of 103 countries served by Shell Companies. You also receive $1,000 spending money to take with you on your holiday overseas.

Cash on-the-spot

When you have collected both left and right halves of a $500, $100, $50, $10 or $2 bill ($10 bill illustrated at left), hand both halves to the dealer.*

After you answer a skill-testing question correctly, the dealer will pay you the face value of your bill in cash.

Over 100,000 winners

There will be thousands and thousands of winners during the next ten weeks. That gives you plenty of chances to win money or a holiday overseas—or both.

So wherever you go from coast to coast, don't pass up any opportunity to drive in to a Shell station during the coming weeks.

*All bills subject to verification. Complete rules are printed on back of "Take Off With Shell" bills. This offer from Shell Canada Limited and its dealers expires June 4th, 1966.

Next time you drive in to a Shell station you could win a trip to one of these countries. Which one would you choose to visit?

SEX and The Teen-age Girl

Are girls' emotions more complex than boys'? What kind of girls do young men prefer to marry? How can the teen-age girl understand and cope with 'advances' from young men? In April Reader's Digest a noted Ph.D. discusses teen-agers and their sex problems. The article "Sex and the Teen-Age Girl" comes close to being essential reading for teen-agers of both sexes and their parents as well. Reader's Digest—now on newsstands everywhere.

MANPOWER
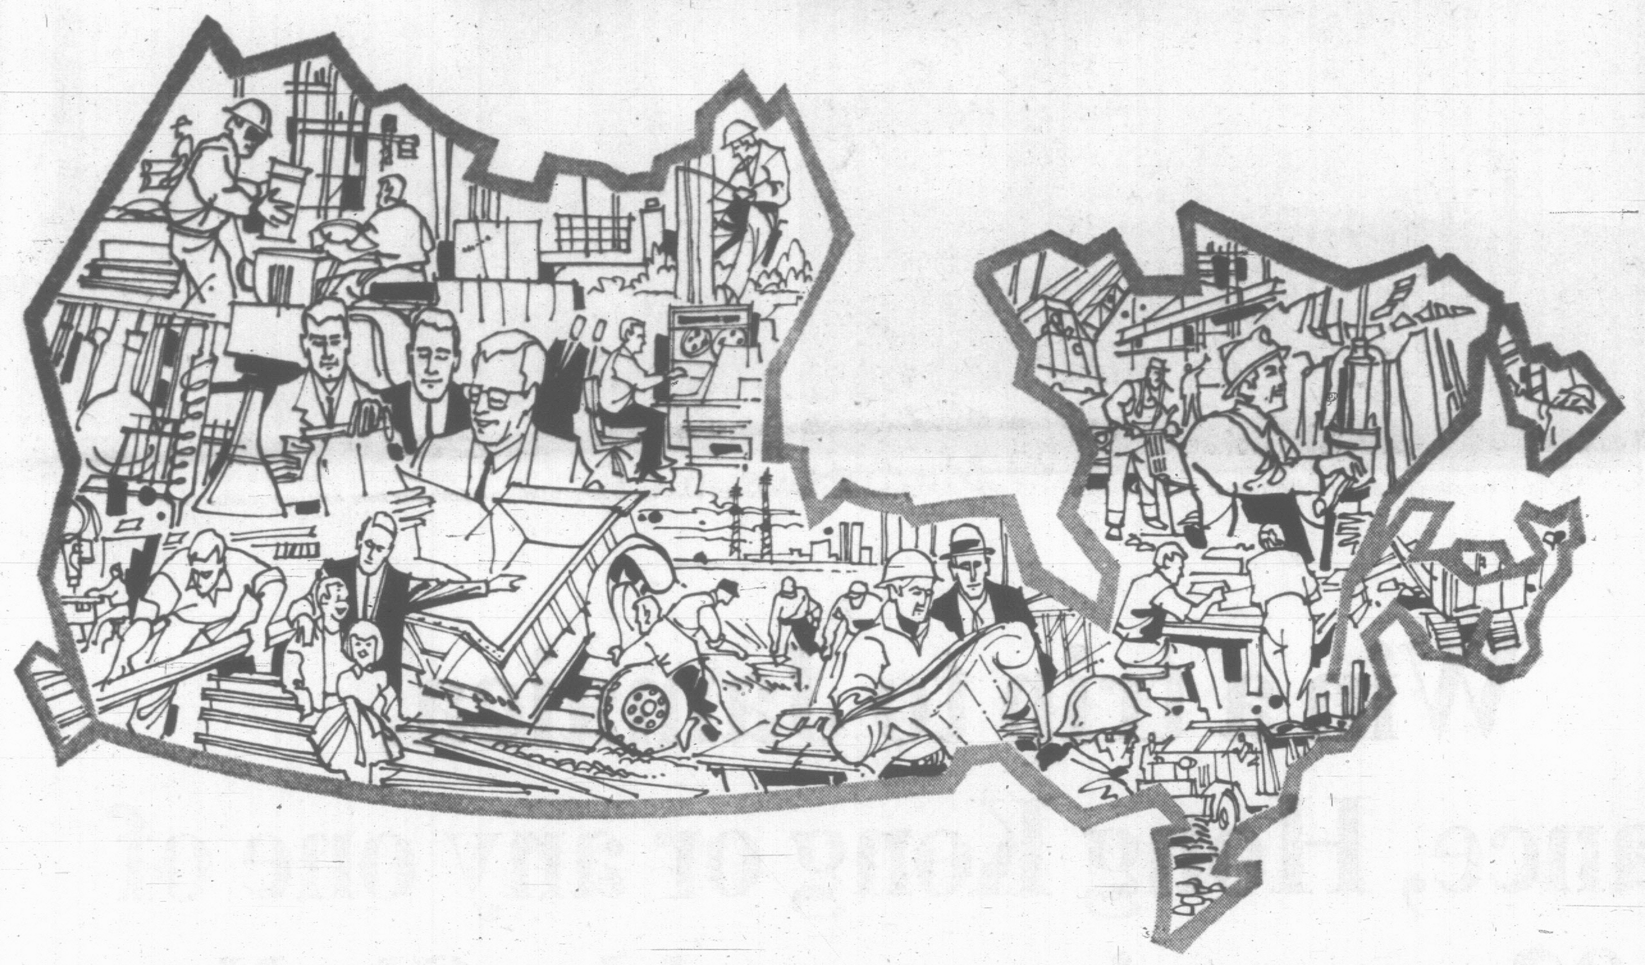
PROGRAM



Widening the Employment Horizon—for job seekers

The primary purpose of the Manpower Mobility Program is to provide financial assistance to Canadian workers who are unemployed and find it necessary to move to other areas in Canada of greater employment opportunity. The program is national in scope providing for loans or grants to workers and their families to cover the cost of moving and resettlement when it is clear that the move is in their own and the country's best interests. The Manpower Mobility Program is an important part of the Government of Canada's over-all manpower program which, within the framework of general economic policy, is designed to help maintain full employment and make the best possible use of the country's manpower resources.

Q. Who is eligible for a loan or grant?

A. You are eligible:—
(a) if there is little or no chance of getting a suitable job in your home area,
(b) if there is suitable employment available elsewhere for which you will be hired, and a shortage of qualified workers,
(c) and if there is a good chance that the new job will result in your permanent resettlement.

You are ELIGIBLE FOR A LOAN—if you are either unemployed or under notice of permanent layoff within 30 days from the day you apply for a loan.

You are ELIGIBLE FOR A GRANT—if you have been unemployed for at least four of the six months preceding the date you apply for a grant;

or

Have completed a provincially approved training course or a program of vocational rehabilitation and re-establishment during the previous three months;

or

Are a former automobile or auto parts worker eligible for Transitional Assistance Benefit in respect of layoff,

or

Are a key skilled worker needed by an employer who received a development grant under the Area Development Incentive Act.

Q. How do I apply?

A. You apply at the nearest office of the National Employment Service. Give them the facts, and they will relate your experience and training to available job opportunities, first locally and then in other areas.

Q. How much of the cost of moving will a loan or grant cover?

A. For a worker with dependents, a loan or grant will pay for the actual cost of transportation of himself and his dependents, including meals and overnight accommodation. Also covered is the actual cost of moving most household and personal effects.

Q. And the costs of resettlement in the new area?

A. For those with dependents, resettlement allowances are $200 each for the worker and his wife and $100 for each additional dependent, up to a maximum of $1,000.

Q. What about a worker without dependents?

A. For a worker without dependents actual transportation costs are paid but loans and grants do not cover the movement of household and personal effects. There is a resettlement allowance of $100 for those receiving loans. Those receiving grants can also receive this resettlement allowance as a loan, not a grant.

Q. How is a loan repaid?

A. Normally, in not more than 20 monthly instalments beginning four months after the loan is made. Interest is 5¾% per annum.

Q. Is there anything else I should know?

A. Yes, if you have obtained a loan or grant and need a medical examination to obtain a suitable job, then an additional grant may be made to cover the cost. If you have moved somewhere to look for a job before this program came into effect, you may be eligible for a loan or grant. For more information—check your local N.E.S. office.

LEADERSHIP BID 'PREMATURE'

4 Ministers Cancel Quebec Jaunt

OTTAWA (CP)—Five cabinet ministers have cancelled plans to attend a major Liberal convention opening today in Quebec City after the intended political pilgrimage received widespread publicity.

The ministers were reported to have come in for criticism by many Liberal MPs for appearing to open a premature race for the party leadership and embarrassing Prime Minister Pearson.

Mr. Pearson himself countered with good-natured ribbing at the expense of the ministers, it was learned.

At a private testimonial dinner Wednesday night for Senator Keith Davey, retiring Liberal national organizer, the prime minister said he was surprised that Senator Davey had accepted a Senate appointment when four other jobs were open to him.

He said it appeared that four of his colleagues needed someone to organize their campaigns for the next Liberal leadership convention. This was only a jest, since Mr. Pearson has said repeatedly he has no plans to retire for some time.

The prime minister was referring to External Affairs Minister Martin, 62, Trade Minister Winters, 55, Finance Minister Sharp, 54, and Defence Minister Hellyer, 42.

TRY OUT FRENCH

Government sources said Tuesday these four ministers with ridings in Ontario and Health Minister MacEachen, 44, from Nova Scotia, planned to drop in at the Quebec convention to button-hole delegates, try out their French—ranging from fluent to hesitant—and size up their personal standing at the grass-roots level.

Reaction was swift after these plans were reported by The Canadian Press.

It was learned that the ministers were chastised by backbenchers at the Libera lcaucus Wednesday for appearing too anxious to replace Mr. Pearson, who turns 69 April 23. The prime minister was urged to stay on as long as he feels like it.

RECORD PRICE AT ART SALE

NEW YORK (AP) — Sixty-eight paintings brought $1,888,200 Thursday night and broke world auction records for works by two artists, at the second session of a two-day auction at Parke-Bernet galleries. On sale was the collection of the late G. David Thompson who built a fortune in steel. The total sale for the two days was $2,416,550.

Sister Leaves Animal Shelter In Split With Mother Cecelia

Two nuns have left the Good Shepherd Shelter for abandoned animals in Mill Bay.

She was replaced by Mother Ferdinand, who came from South Dakota, last August.

After the installation of the new prioress, Sister Ursula left the priory for the animal shelter in Metchosin "because I have the greatest love and respect for Mother Cecilia," she said then.

Cable Snaps

NEW YORK (AP)—One of the four transatlantic cables broke Thursday night, shifting the load on to the other three, the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. reported.

The A.T. and T. spokesman said transatlantic calls went through normally but a short wait during peak periods of overseas calls was possible today.

MARKET SUMMARIES

Toronto, N.Y. Gaining

Airlines and other industrials made wide gains at New York and Toronto today although weekend profit-taking was expected to nip at the early jumps.

AT VANCOUVER Bethex touched a 1966 high in the mining section rising .07 to .67.

Giant Mascot gained .12 to $1.25 and Copper Ridge put on .06 to .47.

Lornex dropped .10 to $6.25 and Western Mines lost the same amount to $5.50.

AT NEW YORK volume for the day was estimated at 7,600,000 shares compared with 7,880,000 Thursday.

Polaroid rose 9, IBM 7, Zenith, Northwest Airlines and Texas Instruments about 5 each, Fairchild Camera nearly 6.

Up about 3 were Xerox, Admiral and Burroughs. Ahead 2 or better were Magnavox, Combustion Engineering and National Airlines.

Boeing, McDonnell Aircraft, Raytheon, American Airlines and Pan American World Airways rose a point or so.

In the main list, John Labatt Ltd. climbed 1 to 17⅝ following an announcement the Jos. Schlitz Brewing Co. of Milwaukee had to divest its control of the Labatt Company.

AT MONTREAL utilities and banks were off but most other sections moved fractionally higher in moderately active trading.

Industrial volume was 184,000 and mines and oils 360,500.

Car Pact Costs U.S. $10 Million

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The labor department calculates the 1965 trade pact with Canada involving automotive parts might cost the government as much as $10 million.

But department officials, testifying before a house appropriations subcommittee in closed-door sessions earlier this month, could justify only $1.4 million in predicted costs.

Rep. Robert M. Michel (R — Ill.) said the subcommittee on which he serves was not persuaded, and would recommend that the full committee allow only one-tenth of the $10 million requested by the department.

The U.S.-Canadian Trade Act approved by Congress last October provided for free trade between the two countries. It was conceded than the U.S. firms and workers in the industry might be "temporarily dislocated" as result of the act.

To cope with this, the new law provides for adjustment aid in the form of weekly allowances, relocation allowances, and special help in finding new jobs or assistance in entering training programs. Additional special help also is authorized for state employment security agencies.

CLOSED HEARINGS

According to the transcript of the closed hearings, made public today, only one petition for assistance was filed with the Labor Department by March 1. It covered 131 workers in the Delaware Valley parts department of the Ford Motor Co.

Subcommittee members apparently boggled over the department's proposal that Congress provide $10 million, no strings atached, for the program. The funds would remain available until spent.

Lower Gas Rates For B.C. Indicated

VANCOUVER (CP)—Dr. Gordon Shrum, co-chairman of the B.C. Hydro and Power authority, said here he will make an announcement concerning possible reductions in B.C. Hydro gas rates March 30.

Dr. Shrum gave the promise following a board meeting in Vancouver attended by Premier Bennett. Earlier this month the premier said he would make "strong recommendations" for a rate reduction at the meeting.

BUT NO OIL AT RAINBOW

Gas Strike Indicated

CALGARY (CP) — The wildcat well in the Rainbow Lake area of northwestern Alberta which apparently triggered heavy trading on the Calgary Stock Exchange "is a Devonian gas discovery but has found no oil." Oil-Gas Day, a daily publication of Oilweek Magazine, said Thursday.

"Extensive checks with scouting sources have supported this rumor, but no confirmation is available from the operator, British American Oil Co. Ltd.," the publication said.

A B-A spokesman said because of normal company procedure of withholding information on a wildcat well and because of the possible effects of such information on land values in the area, B-A would not comment on the report at this time.

The well, Rainbow 13-16 located some 20 miles southeast of the present Rainbow Field, is being drilled by B-A on a 16,000-acre reservation farmed out from Monterey Petroleum, Leduc-Calmar Oils and Wainwright Producers, each of which retain a one-sixth interest in the well and reservation.

TRADE FLURRY

Rumors on the well caused a flurry of trading on the Calgary exchange starting last Monday and the exchange reached a record high volume of 1,143,150 shares Tuesday as prices on Monterey and Leduc-Calmar rose sharply. Wainwright Producers is listed on the Toronto Exchange. All three companies are controlled by Calgary oilman Bill McMahon.

Trading started to level off Wednesday as prices on the key companies slipped back.

Information on the well "is being held tight," the oil daily says, "because of an offsetting drilling reservation covering 8,160 acres which is to be offered for sale by the Alberta government April 5."

"Gas pay at the well is believed to be in the lower muskeg (formation) and it is possible that the gas contains condensate. The underlying Keg River reef, however, is understood to be water-laden . . ." the publication says.

Microwave Plant

MONTREAL (CP) — Lenkurt Electric Co. of Canada Ltd. will construct a plant in Rimouski, Que., to produce microwave and carrier equipment, Charleton W. Hunter, president announced here. E. Stuart Wilson, president of Sylvania Electric Canada Ltd., an affiliated company also announced his company and its two subsidiaries plan to add more than 100,000 square feet to their facilities in Quebec during the next two years.

HOUSING STARTS HIT BY MONEY SHORTAGE

OTTAWA (CP) — A shortage of mortgage money during the second half of 1965 held housing starts in Canada to a slight increase compared to 1964, Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. reported Thursday.

Farmhands Bid For Old Spots With Big Club

By The Canadian Press

A couple of Boston Bruins' farmhands are bidding for another chance to play in the National Hockey League.

Just over a week ago, the Bruins recalled Bob Leiter from Hershey of the American League and sent Wayne Maxner back to the minors.

STAN MIKITA . . . 28th goal

Then, when Ed Westfall suffered a broken toe against New York Rangers last Sunday night, the Bruins put in another call to Hershey—this time for Wayne Rivers.

Both Leiter and Rivers, who played with the Bruins last year, proved they could handle an NHL assignment Thursday night as Boston limited Bobby Hull to one assist in a 3-1 victory over Chicago Black Hawks.

Rookies Score

Leiter's goal Thursday night was his second of the season, while Rivers, playing in his initial game of the season, netted his first. The other Boston marksman was John McKenzie, who scored his 17th of the campaign.

The Bruins also got some spectacular netminding from Ed Johnson, who replaced Bernie Parent in the second period.

Parent twisted his ankle making a save on Hull, who moved a step nearer to the NHL season scoring record with his assist, giving him a total of 94 points so far this year.

Hull has four games left this season to pick up three points to break the record of 96 points in a season, set in 1958-59 by Dickie Moore, former Montreal star.

Play was rough during the game and Mikita was injured in the second period when he was sent into the boards by Don Awrey.

He's in Stitches

Gilles Marotte, Boston's rookie defenceman, received a facial injury while jousting with Hull in front of the Boston net and nine stitches were taken to close a cut inside Marotte's mouth.

Goals by Dave Keon and Frank Mahovlich with less than four minutes left to play gave the Maple Leafs their victory.

The clubs battled to a scoreless stalemate until 16:01 of the final period when Keon combined with Tim Horton and Larry Hillman for his 23rd season goal—a counter that was hotly disputed by the Montrealers who claimed the Leaf centre had been offside on the play.

Mahovlich's 31st season goal came with only 59 seconds remaining to play and was the result of a breakaway on a pressing Montreal team, which was attempting to match Keon's marker.

Veteran goalie Johnny Bower was the difference in the game, as he blocked 34 shots for his third shutout in 30 games this year.

Major League Or None

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — Plans for a 10-team North American Soccer League with a 1968 date target were disclosed Thursday by owner Arthur C. Allyn of the Chicago White Sox.

Allyn, who would field a soccer team in White Sox park at Chicago, said the league still was in the talking stage but would be either a big league operation or none at all.

Among cities interested are Los Angeles, St. Louis, New York, Philadelphia, San Francisco, Vancouver and Toronto, Allyn said.

"We plan to import most of our players from Brazil," said Allyn, who added he favored a early-spring through early-summer season while his baseball club is in spring training or on the road.

Others interested in soccer franchises include Jack Kent Cooke, formerly of Toronto; owners of the Los Angeles Lakers of the NBA and the new Los Angeles franchise in the National Hockey League, and Frank McMahon, Western Canadian industrialist from Vancouver.

'Spectacle' Delayed

Difficulties in preparing a proper track have postponed Victoria Motor Sports Club's "Spectacle of Speed."

Tentatively scheduled for April 10, it has been rescheduled for May 29 at Western Speedway.

"Maybe I'd start climbin' up the fistic ladder if you guys showed a little more confidence in me!"

Minor Boot Clubs To Replay Final

Canadian Scottish and Oak Bay Optimists will do it all over again for the division II Junior and Juvenile Soccer Association final.

Scottish defeated Optimists 2-0 in overtime but the losers protested on the grounds the referee allowed too much time.

The protest was upheld. The teams play at Reynolds Park Sunday at 12:30 p.m.

YOUNGSTERS SHOW THEIR POISE

No Wonder Sir Ronald Getting a Little Tired

Canada Wins Scotch Cup For 7th Time in 8 Years

VANCOUVER (CP)—"I'm getting a little tired of presenting this cup to the Canadian team."

With that, Sir Ronald Cumming Thursday night presented the Scotch Cup, emblematic of the world curling championship, to a Canadian rink for the seventh time in the eight-year history of the tournament.

Sir Ronald, of London, chairman of the group sponsoring the championship, had watched Ron Northcott of Calgary dump the Scottish rink of Chuck Hay from Perth 12-5 in a game that was never in doubt.

Northcott regained for Canada the championship won last year by the United States. He went through the four-day championship undefeated, beating the U.S. rink of Dr. Joseph L. Zbacnik of Moorehead, Minn., 13-10 in his only close match to win first place in the tournament's round-robin section.

Earlier Thursday, Northcott defeated Lars Dracke of Sweden 15-6 in a semi-final. The Americans fell 14-7 to Hay.

Northcott, 30, a construction company executive; third George Fink, 26; second Bernie Sparkes, 25, and lead Fred Storey, 21, broke the final game open with a three in the seventh end to make the score 9-3.

Hay had trouble with the heavy ice throughout and scored only two in the fourth, one in the sixth and two in the 11th before giving up in the 12th.

"We got off to a good start and we just kept going," Northcott said afterwards. "We could handle the heavy ice but the Scots couldn't."

Said Hay: "We couldn't get the rocks up to the house. When we could get the weight we couldn't hit the broom."

Hay was in trouble throughout as his front end missed almost routine shots. He said the rink, which lost to Canada 16-8 earlier in the tournament, played its worst game.

PLAYED WITH CARE

At the same time the Canadians played a careful precision match which saw them pick up twos in the second, fifth and 10th ends.

Northcott said his toughest game was the one against the U.S. whose dentist skip plays out of Fargo, N.D. Dr. Zbacnik had freely predicted his rink would regain the championship for the U.S.

FRANCE A FAVORITE

France was entered for the first time—and lost every match—while receiving great cheers from the almost 20,000 fans who watched the tournament.

Hay represented Scotland for the third time in the championship. He and rinkmates third John Bryden, second Allan Glen and lead David Howie had little trouble with the U.S.

But in the final the rink just couldn't get going. In the seventh end Hay raised a Canadian rock accidentally and allowed Northcott to score three. In the next end Hay missed a takeout that could have allowed him to count two.

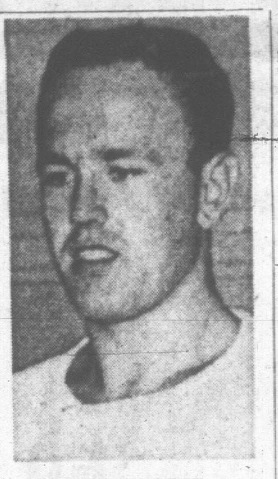
French Girls Lead Slalom

SUN VALLEY, Idaho (AP) — Marielle Goitschel and Annie Famose finished one-two in the slalom Thursday and gave France a lead in the American International Ski team races at Sun Valley.

Miss Goitschel snaked down the slalom courses in a total time of 115.18 seconds for two runs. Miss Famose was second in 119.58.

Canada's Nancy Greene had the best time of 55.10 on the second run and finished fifth.

Comic Opera Continues, Gloves Were Too Large



TOMMY LOCKE

TORONTO (CP)—The problem-plagued fight between champion Cassius Clay and George Chuvalo moved a little farther into the realm of comic opera Thursday.

They staged a try-on ceremony and the gloves were too big.

And that wasn't all.

The Ontario athletic commissioner refused to say what rules will be in effect when Clay and the low-ranked Chuvalo step into the ring here next Tuesday night. He's saving that for next Monday.

Promoters, meanwhile, have been reluctant to divulge how many of the 17,500 seats have been sold in Maple Leaf Gardens, site of the scheduled 15-rounder beginning at 10:30 p.m. EST. But the saga of the overweight gloves didn't hurt ticket sales, which are in need of some ballyhoo.

The gloves weighed in at 10 ounces each at the try-on, from which Clay and athletic commissioner Merv McKenzie were absent.

"I have the same size fist as my fighter," Dundee smiled.

McKenzie managed to be out of town on business until later in the day. A past president of the World Boxing Association which does not recognize Clay as champion, McKenzie has refused to sanction the fight as a title affair.

This means that if Chuvalo, a 7-to-1 underdog, happens to pull an upset, he'll be regarded as the champion except in his own home town.

TUNNEY GETS GLOVES

The glove problem arose when promoter Frank Tunney opened the box containing a set of gloves and handed them to both camps.

"They're a nice glove," Dundee said, trying one on. "But they're 10 ounces and they've got to be eight."

Eight ounce gloves have been required in championship bouts for several years and both Clay and Chuvalo look on this as a title fight.

Dundee called for a set of scales to back up his claim the gloves were too big and they proved him right.

The weigh-in ceremony is set for Tuesday at 11:30 a.m. EST and Ungerman said Chuvalo will likely come in at 209 pounds. Dundee estimated Clay's weight will be about 212.

MIXED TOURNAMENT

A mixed seven-a-side field hockey tournament will be played Saturday at Lansdowne Junior High, starting at 1 p.m.

Tommy Could Snap Lock on Columbus

A lock isn't of much value without a key, but in the case of Victoria United, Locke seems to be the key in the team's recent surge toward a Pacific Coast Soccer League playoff spot.

United carries the hot hand into Saturday's match at Royal Athletic Park against Vancouver Columbus.

The Victorians have won six of their last seven games to climb from sixth to fourth place. And in the past four games, United has given up only one goal.

United could vault past Columbus into third with a win Saturday.

Victoria's revival started just about the time coach Frank Grealy shifted Tommy Locke from the forward to a halfback's spot.

COLUMBUS PLAYS TWICE

Coincidence?

One neutral observer doesn't think so. Referee George Steele is one who firmly believes the shifted Locke turned the key.

"Locke is strong," said Steele, "and has been playing extremely well from the half line."

Saturday's game is the first of two Columbus has agreed to play this weekend. Columbus plays UBC Thunderbirds on Sunday. UBC trails United by only one point and there's no doubt that the results of Columbus' two games will go a long way towards sorting out the playoff picture.

DISTRICT MATCHES

All games start at 2 p.m.

BILL SHEVETZ

Chevvy's Checks Tonic for Leafs

The kind of body-checks Victoria Maple Leaf players like to see are those handed out on occasion by William S. Shvetz.

Wednesday's 4-2 Western Hockey League victory over Vancouver Canucks supplied testimony for the Chevvy tonic.

Shvetz was in a hitting mood in robust game, and the Leaf team, as a whole, responded with a solid, all-around effort.

"When Chevvy is hitting," said coach Frank Mario, "it seems to spark the whole team."

Mario feels a similar display could provide another victory Saturday night when the Leafs entertain the league-leading Portland Buckaroos at Memorial Arena.

FRED HUCUL INJURED

"Games we won or tied with Portland earlier this year were ones in which Chevvy did a lot of hitting," said Mario.

Mario isn't as concerned about Shvetz as he is about Fred Hucul. Victoria's top-scoring defenceman, Hucul suffered a wrenched back in the late stages of Wednesday's game.

Hucul is expected to dress and Mario is hopeful the pain will clear up enough to give the defenceman complete mobility.

Tickets for Saturday's game are going at a brisk pace. Victoria manager Buck Houle said a sellout would boost Leafs' gross receipts to more than $200,000 for 32 home games.

Liddell, Hicks Top Event

Mrs. T. J. Liddell and Mrs. W. V. Hicks topped "A" Division in the women's annual Winter Cup competition at Uplands Golf Club.

Mrs. Hicks posted the best low gross score of 263 for three rounds and Mrs. Liddell was low-net winner with 228.

In "B" Division, Mrs. M. Cave (gross 292) and Mrs. R. B. Young (net 238) took top honors.

Mrs. G. Lovitt won this week's par competition at Uplands, finishing even with regulation figures. Mrs. A. B. Young (1 up) won "B" Division and Mrs. J. Drummond (2 up) paced "C" swingers.

Button Holders Triumph on 18th

Larry McCooey and Roy Johnson of Colwood had a narrow escape before retaining the city senior golf buttons at Uplands this week.

All-Blacks May Play Match at Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP)—The New Zealand All-Blacks rugby team will probably play two games in Canada next year.

Robert Spray, president of the Rugby Union of Canada, said it is "very probable" the New Zealand team will play in Vancouver Oct. 14, 1967, and that the union is trying to arrange a game in either Toronto or Montreal for Oct. 17.

Brewer in Good Spot To Continue Streak

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Gay Brewer is in a good spot to continue the hottest streak in pro golf as the $82,000 Greater Jacksonville Open heads into the second round today.

One stroke off the six-under-par 66 pace set Thursday by Tommy Bolt, Brewer was in a strong position because of his consistency of recent months when he won four tournaments.

For Bolt, whose expert shots over the last 20 years have been overshadowed by his tendency to react to a bad one by smashing a club against a tree, all was serene through his 34-32-66.

Neither is Ed Furgol, 49, former National Open champion who shot a 67 to tie Brewer for second place after 18 holes.

JUNIOR GOLF, CADDY CLINICS . . . . . . SET FOR CITY YOUNGSTERS

Bag-Toting 'Gold Trail' This Summer

By ERNIE FEDORUK

Victoria's summer golf season can be a bit of a "gold trail" for city youngsters.

But they won't have to turn pro to collect.

The magic word is caddy.

There is going to be a heavy demand for bag-toters, and with this serving as a partial invitation, today seems to be a good time to announce that the Victoria District Committee's annual junior golf clinic will be held at Douglas Golflands during Easter.

The clinic, for boys and girls under 19, will be held April 12-14. The school is limited to 100. Youngsters do not have to be members of clubs.

Application forms will be published at the weekend and these should be submitted, along with a $2 registration fee, as soon as possible.

Students must bring along at least three clubs to the clinic — a wood, iron and putter.

A caddy clinic, sponsored by the Vancouver Island branch of the National Association of Lefthanded Golfers, will be held in June under the direction of veteran professional Fred Burns and Colwood's Laurie Kerr.

While it is the NALG's wish to groom caddies for the national tournament July 19-22, the clinic will also be completed before the Pacific Northwest Amateur tournament, July 4-9.

Another tournament that puts out a heavy demand for caddies, the Northwest Seniors' event, will be held in August.

For those who qualify, the three tournaments could provide city youngsters with opportunities to pick up summer spending money.

QUESTION: Do the plate glass partitions that were built behind the team benches at Detroit's Olympia this year cut down any of the heckling from the fans? H.E.F., Detroit.

ANSWER: If the fans want to heckle, they still can get to you. The glass partitions may cut down a little of the shouting directed at us on occasion.

However, I imagine they take a little something away from the fans because they probably dull the sounds of the players' voices when they're on the ice.

Actually, the partitons serve a double purpose. They give the managers and coaches more walking room behind the bench, as well as separating them from the intrusion of any spectator sitting immediately behind them.

The big reason for the glass partitions, however, is to protect the spectators from flying pucks. The sheets of glass that ring the rink are missing in front of the players' benches, in order to enable them to jump over the fence, to get on the ice quickly, instead of going through the gate.

Most of the pucks which are banked off the boards are banked in this area. All a fellow has to do is just tip it a little to put it in the stands. Or if he shoots a little high, it's in the stands.

Because of their quick reactions and the fact they're following the puck closer than the average fans, the players would duck and the puck would hit spectators behind them.

I know Sid Abel has been hit by a flying puck. Our trainer, Lefty Wilson, was clobbered real good a couple of years ago when he turned to hand a player a towel and a puck hit him in the side of the head. Just a fortnight ago when Montreal was playing us, Gilles Tremblay was cut for six stitches in the forehead by a puck as he sat on the bench, and Henri Richard was nicked on the cheek for three stitches by a stick.

Montreal Crew In Favored Slot

KAMLOOPS, B.C. (CP)—Quebec moved into a solid position here Thursday night to take the national legion curling championship.

Garth Ruiter's Montreal foursome had no trouble whipping Walter Yaroshuk's Manitoba rink 14-7 in an eighth-round game that left Quebec in the lead with seven victories and one loss.

If Quebec can beat the slumping British Columbia team in today's ninth and final round, it will give the title to the Montrealers.

A tie might force a playoff between Quebec and one of the other top teams, among them Manitoba, Alberta and Nova Scotia.

Ruiter scored a seventh-round win earlier Thursday, defeating Saskatchewan 16-10.

In other eighth-round play Thursday night, John Wolfe of Alberta turned back B.C. 12-11, Ontario's George Holborn edged Frank Hoar of Nova Scotia 9-8, Dan Owen of Saskatchewan trounced Arthur Ballen's P.E.I. crew 13-7 and Everett McKinnon of New Brunswick downed Jim Archibald of Newfoundland 13-8.

In other seventh-round afternoon matches, Nova Scotia whipped Newfoundland 17-8—leaving them winless during the entire tournament—New Brunswick dumped P.E.I. 17-5, Alberta uspet Ontario 13-7 and Manitoba downed B.C. 12-9.

Cup Rugby Final To End Saturday

James Bay Athletic Association will be going into the final game of the city first division rugby final with a six-point cushion.

The Oarsmen defeated Oak Bay Wanderers 9-3 last Saturday in the opening match of a two-game, total-points series for the Barnard Cup.

The long-time rivals will clash in the second on the Macdonald Park pitch Saturday at 2 p.m.

Servants Reach McGinnis Final

Civil Service moved into the final of the Stuffy McGinnis Hockey League playoffs Thursday by defeating Victoria Press 6-4.

Victory gave Servants a sweep of their best-of-three series. Mercury Marine forced a third game in their series with Victoria Machinery Depot with a 4-1 victory at Memorial Arena.

Scorers:

Civil Service — Doug Cole 2, Dennis Berry, Frank Coburn, Gord Wickware, Bill Schwartzenberger, total 6. Victoria Press — Dick Gibbons 2, Pete Cook 2.

Final On Tap Tonight

Claremont needs one more triumph to place the Howard Russel Cup on its trophy shelf.

Unbeaten this season, Claremont clashes with defending champion Mount View tonight in the final playoff game for the local high school rugby championship.

The match will be played at Royal Athletic Park, starting at 7:30.

Bulwarked by a powerful pack of forwards, Claremont won six games and played to two draws during the league schedule. Included in the victories were 5-3 and 10-5 decisions over the Views.

HOOP SQUADS CHASE TITLES

Basketballs will bounce for nearly 10 solid hours Saturday when pre-midget boys and girls battle for Island and provincial championships at Victoria High School.

Sixteen teams of girls and boys from eight to 12 years will compete in the annual tourney.

First ball will be thrown at 10 a.m. Games will follow throughout the day with the final at approximately 8 p.m.

Ford Leading Elks' Bonspiel

GRANDE PRAIRIE (CP)—The Saskatchewan rink skipped by Gary Ford of Milestone remained unbeaten and in first place Thursday after four rounds of the Elks curling championships.

Ford and his mates were pressed to gain victories by 9-8 scores over Howard Sger and his Manitoba rink from Morden and the Alberta entry skipped by Fritz Pavka of Taber.

Two costly misses by Manitoba on the last end enabled Saskatchewan to count three for the victory and drop the Morden crew into second place.

FORT WILLIAM (CP)—A last-rock takeout in the 10th end gave Nova Scotia a 10-7 victory over previously unbeaten Northern Ontario in the eighth round of the national mixed curling championship.

The win was the third in eight starts for Herb MacNeil of Sydney. The loss was the first suffered by Bill Tetley of Port Arthur after six consecutive wins. He still remains on top of the standing, followed closely by defending champion Alberta and Manitoba, both with 5-2 won-lost records.

While Lee Green of Calgary was idle in the eighth round, Ernie Boushy of Winnipeg scored his fifth victory in seven starts when he downed Len Kalichak, Newfoundland's representative, 6-3.

Fourth-place British Columbia also registered a fifth win with an extra-end 7-6 verdict over Ted Jurista of Vanscoy, Sask., while fifth-place New Brunswick trounced Ontario 15-9 and Quebec defeated Prince Edward Island 8-5.

Boushy, who is trying for his second championship to go with the one he earned in 1964, had little trouble beating Kalichak of Goose Bay 6-3 in the eighth after the Winnipeg skip dropped a 12-8 decision to Glen Harper of Duncan, B.C., in the seventh round.

Tetley's loss gave Harper, skipping a rink that includes his wife Marg and By and Vera Wilson, continuing hope of tying for the lead.

The Duncan rink has a bye in this afternoon's round but returns to the ice tonight against P.E.I. Harper faces Newfoundland in his last-round game Saturday morning.

PONTIACS ARE HOPING TO DELIVER KNOCKOUT

Put up or pack up.

That's the situation for University of Victoria Vikings.

They trail Esquimalt Pontiacs 2-0 in the best-of-five series for the Esquimalt Hockey League's Colony Cup.

What could be the grand finale for Pontiacs is scheduled to start at 8 p.m. at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

To put up, Vikings must stop Pontiacs' Orv Coulter and Doug Couch. The C boys have been double trouble for Vikings, scoring five goals in Esquimalt's 6-4 victory Tuesday.

Senior Circuit Tries New Park

Victoria's Senior Amateur Baseball League has found a new home, at least until reconstruction of burned-out Royal Athletic Park stands is completed.

Saanich is making Hampton Park available to the senior sluggers and is currently rebuilding the field for the new season.

League officials today announced that at least five teams will again be in action, with Chemainus ready for a second campaign against four city clubs.

Roster of the league will be increased to six teams if enough capable players sign up during registration sessions.

Registrations, to be held in conjunction with those for the under-19 Connie Mack League, are scheduled for Athletic Park on April 1, 2 and 3. Times for signing will be announced next week.

Button Golf Victory

Victoria Golf Club partners Mrs. D. W. Stoneham and Mrs. W. K. Goodland won the city senior women's golf buttons this week by downing the Colwood pair of Mrs. V. Skillings and Mrs. R. Rickinson at Uplands.

Then we invited five big men to ride her down the roadbed at 45. Even at that speed, the Austin 1800 held a safe, even keel all the way!
That's Hydrolastic suspension at work for you. It replaces springs and shock absorbers with a remarkable cushion of fluid—actually floats you over the ruts and bumps.
One more thing. Take another look at the picture. Big men. Five of them, and it could just as easily be a family of six. Either way, the Austin 1800 can handle them all—because BMC mounts the engine sideways instead of lengthwise. The 1800 gives you at least 16 inches more leg-room than comparable North American cars of its size—and you get this big-car comfort without paying the big-car price!

NATIONAL ACCOUNTS

All Levels Show Surplus

OTTAWA (CP) — The combined taxing and spending activities of all levels of government—federal, provincial and municipal—resulted in a surplus last year of $251,000,000 compared with a deficit in 1964 of $102,000,000.

The pre-budget paper tabled in the Commons today analysed the revenues and expenditures of all levels of government on what is known as the national accounts basis.

This system of government accounting is on a calendar-year ending March 31, and embraces all kinds of government income and outgo. The federal government's budgetary accounts, for instance, do not include the old age security and unemployment insurance funds.

The federal government's surplus on the national accounts basis last year was $535,000,000, compared with $246,000,000 in 1964. On the budgetary accounts basis, the federal government is ending the current fiscal year with a deficit of $34,000,000, compared with one of $38,500,000 in 1964-65.

PROVINCES' SURPLUS UP

The 10 provincial governments had a combined surplus on the national accounts basis last year of $290,000,000, compared with a surplus of $104,000,000 in 1964.

The municipal governments ran up a combined deficit in 1965 of $574,000,000, compared with a deficit of $452,000,000 in 1964.

Economists say the national accounts system shows the real impact of government taxation and spending on the economy as a whole.

A deficit means governments are putting more money into the economy than they are taking out. This has a pump-priming effect on a slack economy, encouraging more output and jobs than would result from a balance in the national accounts.

The white paper says combined expenditures of provincial and municipal governments amounted to 12 per cent of gross national product last year, an indication of their growing importance in economic activity. In 1953 their expenditures were 7½ per cent of the GNP, total value of goods and services produced.

Burning Up Millions More Into Coffers

OTTAWA (CP)—The federal tax man's take seems to indicate the cigarette lung cancer scare may have run its course.

In the government's fiscal year ending March 31, revenue from various tobacco taxes is estimated to be $25,500,000 higher than in the previous year for the biggest year-to-year increase since the $42,500,000 advance in 1959-60.

The pre-budget white paper tabled in the Commons today estimates 1965-66 excise taxes and excise duty on cigarettes, tobacco and cigars will total $421,000,000 compared with $395,500,000 in 1964-65 and $392,600,000 in 1963-64. It gives no breakdown for each of the three.

Excise taxes are estimated at $237,000,000 compared with $218,300,000 a year ago and $226,900,000 in 1963-64. This tax is collected from the manufacturer on his sales and reflects rate of consumption. The increase this year of $18,700,000 compares with a decrease of $8,600,000 in 1964-65.

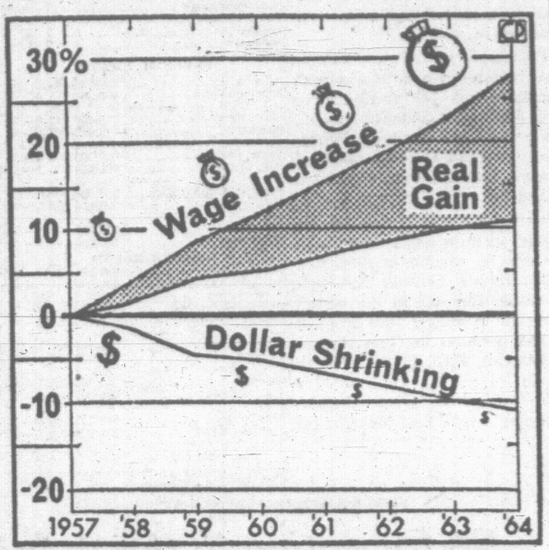
The other form of tobacco tax, excise duty, is levied on the manufacture of the product and produces revenue ahead of sales. It is estimated to increase this year by $6,800,000 to $184,000,000. In 1964-65, it increased by $11,500,000 but in 1963-64 dropped $800,000.

As usual, smokers far outclass drinkers in developing tax revenue for the government coffers.

Their total tax bill for the current fiscal year, including matches and lighters, is estimated at $422,300,000.

Spirits, beer and wine—each of which is subject to one federal tax—are expected to produce $265,300,000 compared with $244,200,000 in 1964-65, an increase of $21,100,000.

Excise duty on spirits is estimated at $155,000,000 this year and on beer $106,000,000. Wine is subject to excise tax, but not excise duty, and revenue is estimated at $4,300,000.



DESPITE the shrinking value of the consumer's dollar caused by increased prices, steadily rising wages have resulted in real gains in purchasing power. The additional spending power, however, in consumers' hands has led to some fears that it is starting an inflationary spiral. The graph is based on 1957 dollar equalling 100. Wage increases are shown in yearly percentage increases from the same date.

You Owe $12 Less This Year Than Last

Estimated net debt for the year ending March 31 was $782 for every man, woman and child in the country. That's $12 lower than the $794 a year previous.

The pre-budget white paper tabled in the Commons today by Finance Minister Sharp showed the country's total net debt at $15,538,400,000.

Although that was $34,000,000 above last year—equal to the estimated budget deficit incurred this year—there were also more people around to share the burden.

Current population level is estimated at 19,865,000 against 19,516,000 a year ago.

Two years ago the per capita debt was $785, and the year before that $739.

INCREASE LOWER

The rise in the total debt this year was less than 10 per cent of that reported a year ago—$479,000,000. It also was the smallest increase since the 1956-57 fiscal year in which the debt was slashed by $272,000,000 due to a hefty budget surplus.

Net debt is calculated by taking the gross public debt, now at $27,617,100,000, and deducting the government's net recorded assets of $12,078,700,000.

Using the same deductions on gross interest payments, the interest being paid on the net debt this year amounts to $616,000,000 compared to $589,000,000 last year. The interest rate works out to 3.96 per cent, up from 3.80.

Mr. Sharp said debt charges now are the third largest item of federal expenditure after defence and health.

Actress to Wed

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (UPI)—Actress Rhonda Fleming, 40, and producer Hall Bartlett, 44, applied for a marriage licence Thursday and said they would be married soon. Bartlett recently was divorced by his second wife. It will be the third marriage for Bartlett and Miss Fleming.

CONSTRUCTION TO LEVEL OFF

Prices to Continue Upward

OTTAWA (CP)—Finance Minister Sharp says all economic signs point to a continued rise in prices this year, triggered by a renewed surge of demand and a tightening supply situation.

In his pre-budget white paper tabled today in the Commons, he says it would not be prudent to assume a price rise any less than that recorded in 1965 when the consumer price index was up 2.4 per cent from 1964.

The consumer price index, based on 1949 prices equalling 100, rose to a year's average in 1965 of 138.7 from 135.4 in 1964, but the index at the end of 1965 was 140.8, up 2.9 per cent from the end of 1964.

With the economy at the height of an unprecedented boom, the basic question was whether production could expand fast enough to meet the anticipated rapid increase in demand while maintaining stability.

"It is clear . . . that current upward price trends could well persist unless significant productivity improvements emerge to add to the supply capacity of the economy, or unless the rate of increase in demand should turn out to be notably lower than currently expected."

With employment and earnings at high levels, consumer purchases would probably continue to increase.

"Personal expenditures on durable goods will probably not advance quite as rapidly as in 1965, since spending on furniture and appliances which go into new houses will be affected by the level rate of residential construction now expected for 1966.

"Manufacturers expect that the present high rate of automobile purchases will continue in 1966. There has been a continuous increase in number of cars per family and a reduction in the average age of the stock of cars on the road, for a number of years.

"In addition, the large number of new entrants to the labor force makes increased car ownership possible.

"Non-durable purchases, such as food and clothing, should advance at much the same rate as in the last year.

"The volume of consumer purchases of services has continued to rise, while prices of many of these items have increased substantially. These prices are expected to continue to increase in the months ahead."

Individuals Paying Less On Loans

OTTAWA (CP) — Municipalities, public utilities and big industrial corporations were paying more interest on their borrowings at the end of last year than individuals at chartered banks.

The white paper tabled in the Commons today says interest rates rose generally last year as a result of U.S. guidelines on foreign American investment and the default last June of Atlantic Acceptance Corp.

The report also says the higher interest rates reflect the heavier demands for credit associated with the high rate of economic growth "and a tighter monetary policy posture."

Current banking legislation limits chartered bank charges on loans to six per cent.

The white paper says public utility authorities at the end of 1965 were paying 6.01 per cent to borrow funds on long-term bonds, compared with 5.48 per cent in December, 1964.

Municipal long-term bonds were paying 6.03 per cent, compared with 5.57 per cent a year earlier, and industrial corporations were paying 6.05 per cent, compared with 5.47 per cent.

DECLINE IN UNEMPLOYMENT FORECAST IN '66 REPORT

OTTAWA (CP)—There will be increased demand for manpower in 1966 and a resulting continued decline in unemployment, Finance Minister Sharp predicts in his pre-budget white paper.

Some of the demand will be met by an increase in part-time workers, particularly among married women and persons previously retired or voluntarily idle. Skilled workers will be scarce.

But Mr. Sharp's economic report, tabled today in the Commons, adds that an expected increase in total man-hours available for production will not likely increase manpower productivity "in the present circumstances."

During 1965 unemployment averaged 3.9 per cent of the labor force and in the year's late months was well below that.

The labor force grew three per cent from 1964 while persons at work rose 3.8 per cent.

There was increased movement out of farm employment, a substantial rise in the female labor force and higher immigration, all in response to a big demand for labor. This showed the higher degree of elasticity in the labor supply.

"At the same time, there were proportionately fewer workers with experience in modern Canadian industry among those obtaining jobs in 1965, as the pool of experienced unemployed shrank, while there were proportionately more workers entering employment direct from home, from school, from abroad and from the farm sector."

Thus, the gain in productivity—output per man-hour—was at a lower rate than either the postwar average or the average of recent years. For all industries, it increased 1.5 per cent over 1964. In manufacturing, where the average annual postwar gain had been 2.8 per cent, it fell to two.

Labor income last year increased 10.6 per cent while corporation profits rose 11 per cent.

NEW WARNING DEVICE

Beeps to Prevent Plane Collisions

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (AP) — McDonnell Aircraft Corp. announced Thursday it has developed a warning device that can eliminate mid-air collisions of airplanes.

The device has been tested on McDonnell's phantom jet fighter planes and probably will be developed for use by airliners.

It provides a 60-second warning to airplanes converging at speeds of up to four times the speed of sound, (640 m.p.h. at sea level) and even tells the pilots what evasive action to take to avoid a collision, a McDonnell spokesman said.

Airlines have been seeking such a system for 10 years. McDonnell claimed it is the first to develop it, and in Washington, a spokesman for the Air Transport Association of America said a collision avoidance system "is closer to realization than at any previous time."

USES ARROWS

The safety device is called EROS for Eliminate Range Zero System. It gives collision warnings to airplanes 1½ miles apart. The cockpit indicator has up and down arrows and a leveloff light.

"When a collision warning has been evaluated by the system," the McDonnell spokesman said, "the pilots hear a beeping sound. Then they look at their indicators and take the necessary action."

Both planes must be equipped with the device.

The equipment is contained in a missile-shaped pod mounted under 26 Phantom jets, the planes produced by McDonnell and used in Viet Nam. The device has only been used in testing in the St. Louis area.

The spokesman said discussions with airlines, the Federal Aviation Agency and top military officials have been underway for some time on production of the system. No specific plans have been formulated, the company said.

PRICE SECRET

McDonnell would not announce the cost of the device because, it said, there are "too many variables."

The device works on a radio signal transmitted every two seconds. By measuring the time delay between transmission by one aircraft and reception by another, the system figures the distance between planes, determines the rate of approach, and decides how the collision can be avoided.

The system can protect 1,000 aircraft at a time within a 40-mile radius of each other, as long as all are equipped with the device, a spokesman said.

One spokesman said the device would be too costly for private airplane owners, but would be within the reach of airlines, the military and companies which own their own planes.

Bandits Executed

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Six bandits were executed by a firing squad Thursday in a troop-ringed temple courtyard, only 150 yards away from a market where they killed five persons in a raid last December.

TO LEAVE CYPRUS FORCE

DUBLIN (Reuters) — The Republic of Ireland has announced its peacekeeping force in Cyprus will be withdrawn April 18 unless the United Nations meets the cost of an extra three-month term of duty.

External Affairs Minister Frank Aiken said in the Dail (parliament) Wednesday this represented a change in policy. Formerly the government has been prepared to pay for Ireland's contribution to the force. He added:

"I think if we are accused of anytihng, it is that we have tried to do too much for international peace."

Blood Demand Jumps

TRAIL (CP)—The demand for blood in Canada rises by about eight per cent each year, Red Cross national commissioner Major-General Arthur Wrinch of Toronto, said here.

Influence Peddling Charged

BRYDEN

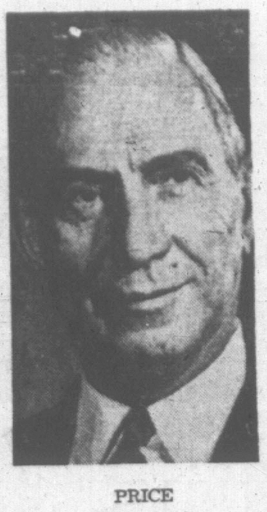
MARCHAND
. . . distillery president

GROSSMAN
. . . subject of letter



PRICE
. . . fund raiser

TORONTO (CP) — Kenneth Bryden (NDP — Toronto-Woodbine) introduced two letters in the legislature Thursday, claiming both indicated that a senior fund raiser of the Progressive Conservative party engaged in influence-peddling during the 1963 provincial election.

Mr. Bryden called for a judicial inquiry into the circumstances outlined in the letters.

Premier John Robarts later promised the legislature he will examine all the facts, then decide what action should be taken.

The first letter, dated Jan. 17, 1962, is from Sarto Marchand, president of Melchers Distilleries Ltd. of Montreal, to James Neal McDowell, then Ontario sales manager of the firm.

It referred to a conversation between Mr. Marchand and Harry Price, a Toronto insurance broker who worked for the Conservative party as a fund raiser.

MENTIONED GROSSMAN

In the letter Mr. Marchand said of Mr. Price:

"He made it a point to mention that he was very close to the new Ontario Liquor Control Board chairman, Mr. Allan Grossman, and that we would find him very co-operative."

Mr. Grossman, now minister of reform institutions, was then chief commissioner of the liquor board.

The second letter, dated Aug. 20, 1963, was from Mr. McDowell to Mr. Marchand.

The letters are on file at Osgoode Hall in Toronto as evidence in a civil suit brought in 1963 by Mr. McDowell against Melchers, Mr. Bryden said.

When Mr. Bryden finished speaking, Mr. Grossman hotly denied that anyone had ever used undue influence on him. He said this case "has been held over my head for three years."

"During the 1963 election campaign an attempt was made to blackmail me with that letter."

WON'T GIVE NAME

In response to questions from Mr. Bryden, he refused to name the person who attempted to blackmail him.

Mr. Bryden told the house he was reading the letters because of their description of the activity of Mr. Price, "a leading fund-raiser for the Progressive Conservative party of Ontario."

"There is no evidence either in the letters or elsewhere . . . that the present and past chief commissioners were in fact subject to the influence that Mr. Price claimed."

Before Mr. Grossman rose to defend himself, Mr. Bryden said there can be no question of the authenticity of the letters. He said Mr. McDowell has taken an oath verifying the copies on file.

Mr. Bryden said the Marchand letter indicated that money had changed hands. The letter said:

"After a long discussion on Ontario politics, Mr. Price was given an envelope containing an amount which he had asked for and he seemed very satisfied with our co-operation."

CONTAINED CASH

Mr. Bryden said the envelope obviously contained cash.

Mr. Grossman called a press conference later and flatly denied that Mr. Price had ever discussed with him brands of liquor sold by the LCBO.

Mr. Price was unavailable for comment.

In his suit against Melchers, Mr. McDowell names two Conservative party officials and a cabinet minister and claims Mr. Marchand gave the party a large sum of money to secure influence in government circles.

Mr. McDowell claims he lost position and salary with Melchers because he had refused to pay the money to a party official. He asked $50,000 damages and a further $200,000 punitive damages.

The writ was issued Sept. 6, 1963, but the trial date for the case has not been set.

Technicians Wanted Everywhere

The Canadian economy could readily absorb 8,500 technician course graduates.

And each year in the future 10 per cent could be added to the figure.

The estimate comes from the federal department of labor, which also points out that at present Canada is producing only a fraction of the graduates needed. By 1967 the graduate output will be 4,400 per annum.

These and other like facts are included in a booklet, "Supply and Demand—Technological Institute Graduates," which is now available from National Employment Service here.

The booklet is intended for students of Canadian institutes of technology but also has value for prospective employers, teachers and school counsellors, says George Bevis, NES manager.

With starting salaries for technicians ranging from $390 to $400 a month, the booklet suggests that many more high school students should give thought to this type of training.

SUKARNO PUTS UP FIGHT

Radio Jakarta also quoted Lt.-Gen. Suharto, the country's new strongman, as saying "opportunists" and "vested interests" were trying to interfere. Observers said he apparently was referring to several political parties with nominees for the cabinet.

Sources said the new cabinet probably would have 24 to 30 members, compared with the unwieldy 100-man cabinet Sukarno put together over the years.

The Indonesian parliament, an appointed advisory assembly, urged Thursday that the new cabinet be free from Communist elements.

LETTER FROM PARADISE

Oh How They Miss The Four Seasons

By ELIZABETH FORBES

During the past few days Victoria citizens have been savoring the return of spring to our land. There's a renewed warmth in the air, the flowers are unfolding their petals and the skies are blue.

"It's here," people are saying, "it's here!"

Forgotten are the cold winds and the slanting rains of winter. We push out of our memories all thought of the snows that came and the late frosts that nipped at the flower buds. Instead, we look ahead to long days of sunshine and good weather.

Forbes

"It's the way it should be all the time," one man said to me Thursday. "Victoria would be heaven if the weather would stay warm and sunny the year around."

That's quite a thought! I imagine there are many who would subscribe to it. However, I wonder if by some whim of nature Victoria was given the kind of climate that changes little in the full cycle of a year, whether we would not in time long for the turn of the seasons and the ability to recognize them as they arrive.

This was brought home to me today when I recieved a letter from Alf and Thelma Foubister, former Victorians who have been living on the island of St. Lucia in the Caribbean for the past two years.

Mr. Foubister was one of 162 Canadian school teachers who in 1964 accepted assignments in other parts of the world through Canada's external affairs office.

The letter says: "We have just finished lunch and are about to have our afternoon siesta . . . because it is a balmy 86 degrees right now . . . and this is supposed to be the 'cool' season down here."

Here the Foubisters point out that while travel folders of the West Indies (when you are in Canada) give the impression "this is a paradise on earth" . . . "and it is, in many ways" . . . they are also certain that living in such a paradise forever "would be h . . ."

Then comes the very revealing sentence—"never in our lives have we appreciated the four seasons of life in the temperate zones so much."

St. Lucia is a beautiful island, the Foubisters say. There are many lovely beaches, such warm water and so many gorgeous fruits and beautiful flowers.

"It is small wonder that the rich come here to spend a holiday . . . they have nothing to do, in the way of work, and they are waited on hand and foot . . . and this can be wonderful.

"It's vastly different matter when you have to work, even five days a week. However, it's been a great experience and we have enjoyed every minute of it."

Alf's contract finishes in June. When the letter was written he had just received word of his next assignment, in Uganda, East Africa.

There he will go to the University of East Africa, at Kampala (Mackerere College), to lecture at the Institute of Education on the principles of education.

"Although we shall be sitting astride the equator, we shall be three or four thousand feet above it, where the average temperature appears to be between 65 and 85 degrees," the Foubisters write.

The letter says that there was much excitement during the recent visit of Her Majesty the Queen and Prince Philip to St. Lucia. Being among the very few Canadian Canadians there, the Foubisters were singled out by the royal couple at an official reception in Government House. "The Queen asked many questions about the college," Alf says, "and Prince Philip was most interested in 'who pays you'?"

"So life goes on," the letter concludes," and it has been a wonderful life. But, let us count you in on a secret . . . as much as we have enjoyed it, there is still no place like Canada, no province like British Columbia and no part of British Columbia like Vancouver Island."

The Foubisters will return to Victoria early in July for two months home leave. With them will be their two youngest, Mile and Chanel.

Their eldest daughter, Sandra, who has been with her parents completing three years with the Canadian Navy (WRNS) will leave for England in April. Another daughter, Michele, comes to Victoria next month. Murray, the eldest boy, is at UBC.

Quit Dolphin Fishing

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union has decided to quit its dolphin fishing operations because it fears dolphins are threatened with extinction. "We hope that other countries will follow our example," said an article in Izvestia, the government newspaper.

'VILLAGE' RAIDED

NEW YORK (AP)—Forty detectives and policewomen, some of them garbed in beatnik outfits, have swept through Greenwich village in a raid aimed at drying up the area's narcotics traffic.

Thursday night and early today, 27 persons in age from 15 to 30 were arrested climaxing two weeks of intensive undercover investigation by officers who infiltrated the hangouts favored by the alleged dope users and pushers.

Large quantities of heroin, marijuana and amphetamines (goof balls) were confiscated.

The individuals were booked on assorted charges, including selling narcotics, possession of narcotics, loitering for the purpose of using narcotics and possession of amphetemines.

TORONTO (CP) — Two Toronto men and a woman were convicted Thursday on charges of possession and trafficking in narcotics arising from an RCMP raid on an apartment shared by the three in January.

VICTORIA, B.C., FRIDAY, MARCH 25, 1966—PAGE 21

Arthur Mayse

For a start, let us take the venerable Duck's Building by its four corners and carefully transfer it from View Street where I plunked it in a moment of madness, back to its proper site at 1318 Broad.

That done, I suggest we now stock up with some cold fried chicken, to be washed down with beer, vin rose or soda pop as you prefer, and take ourselves off to some grassy spot where the sun strikes warm and spring has scattered her blossoms.

If I had my druthers, which happens just often enough to keep me from bitterness, we would, in fact, junk our present calendar and add an extra day to each week.

"Slothday," we'd name it, and I think it would fit nicely between bustling Wednesday and scurrying Thursday.

It would be for loafing and dreaming and the lazy kind of thinking to which earth owes many of its more significant advances.

History may have a different version, but you can take it from me that Gilileo didn't do his star-gazing with his nose in a book.

His most profound discoveries, I'm convinced, were made through the leaves of some midnight tree, probably with a pretty head nestled on his shoulder.

The same for other great men. The best they produced came to them when they declared a Slothday and got hit by a falling apple (Newton) or were drowsing in a warm bath (Archimedes) or fooling around with a key on a kite-string (Ben Franklin).

They don't . . . they can't . . . let their thoughts go walkabout in the limbo where lurk ideas that dart away like trout in a shallow from the purposeful approach.

The fellow who first conceived the notion of hinging a knife-blade to a handle so it would slip into his pocket was undoubtedly a whittler who liked to sit in the sun and peel off idle shavings when the mood took him.

The typewriter was the brain-child of a man who rebelled against the clerkish slavery of the copper-plate hand, guided just so over the paper with shoulders hunched and tongue between teeth.

Undoubtedly, one day when the grass was green and the birds were giving praise for lovely life, he tossed his pen over his shoulder and took off.

He mooched home at evenfall with grass stains on his pants, and in his head the pilot model of a machine which would render penmanship obsolete.

Well, I can't toss this clattering beast of a typewriter over my shoulder, but about five minutes from now I mean to declare myself a spring dividend in the form of a Slothday.

Probably nothing will come of it except a contented mind. Still, you never know what shy deer will step out of the woods if, instead of bustling around in circles, a man settles himself comfortably, slips his brain into neutral and lets life's hurly-burly fade from sight and sound.

Once after half a year of hard and fruitless writing, I declared a Slothday and took myself off to a wild beach where I did nothing more constructive than steam clams and help the tide come in.

My fire had a stick of island juniper in it, and from that unmatchable incense, a story evolved.

I called it "Scent of Juniper." An editor renamed it "To Walk in Honor," and under that title it fetched a price that sent the wolf scampering from our door.

Slothday, of course, isn't for everybody. There are those, and I pity them, who must churn their busy motors till the main bearing burns out.

But not me! I'm off to consider the lilies of the field, or the daffodils and the flowering plum at least, and I won't be back till Slothday's over.

Woman Fined $25

Mrs. Sonria Humphry, trading as Hart House, 1961 Fairfield, was fined $25 in central court Thursday for failing to make records available to the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

She pleaded guilty.

Mayor Suspects 'Horse-Trading' In Parks Budget

Veteran estimates - defender Herbert Warren, Victoria parks administrator, ran into heavy going this morning as a five-man city council committee reviewed his 1966 budget requests.

Mr. Warren was faring well until the committee came to his first major expenditure proposal — a new crew headquarters for men working in Beacon Hill Park.

He asked $18,500 for the new building.

"If this item is approved we can remove the old and unsightly wooden sheds we are now using in the centre of the park and replace them with a modern building," he said.

UNMOVED

The plea was eloquent but the committee, which up to that point had trimmed only a few thousand dollars from the budget, appeared unmoved.

It ordered the $18,500 chopped.

The same fate awaited a latter application for $12,000 to build new public toilet facilities in Victoria West Park.

But Mr. Warren didn't lose them all.

His bid for $19,500 to build new headquarters for small park crews at Topaz Park won grudging committee approval.

"The small parks crews have been without a home since the fire at Royal Athletic Park destroyed their old headquarters," Mr. Warren told the committee.

'HORSE-TRADING'

"It sounds like a little horse-rading to me," said Mayor A. W. Toone remembering Mr. Warren's calm acceptance of the Beacon Hill cut.

Once in slashing mood the committee made up for its earlier generosity.

A request for $1,000 for the installation of playground equipment at Highview playground was cut with little discussion.

So were requests for $3,600 for an underground sprinkling system in Centennial Square, $2,600 for a motorcycle with box for carrying equipment, $950 for a new power mower, and $1,300 for new tools and equipment for the maintenance yard.

"How do we water Centennial Square now?" asked Ald. Hugh Stephen.

"With hoses and sprinklers," answered Mr. Warren.

"I think we can carry on that way for a little while," said Ald. Stephen and a unanimous committee agreed.

Among the major expenditures approved by the committee was $18,000 to renew the old greenhouse at the city's nursery stock headquarters.

NEEDED

"It sounds like a lot of money," said Ald. Stephen. "But I have visited the greenhouses and I'm convinced the expenditure is needed and justified. After all the greenhouse is the heart of our entire parks system."

The total amount requested by the parks department to maintain the city's recreational areas is $572,623 an increase of $21,204 over last year.

In addition the department is requesting $189,045 for new development, equipment and buildings. Last year the department spent $44,432 on extraordinary projects.

Under a third section of the parks budget Mr. Warren is asking for approval of $118,065 to spend on other community services. The amount is $23,975 higher than last year.

Retired Foreman At Newspaper Succumbs at 83

A former foreman of the Victoria Colonist composing room, Alfred Charles Chislett, died Thursday. He was 83.

A native son of Victoria, he is survived by the widow, Agnes, and a daughter, Mrs. Rudolph (Eileen) Kullman, at the family home, 2510 Prior, and a sister, Mrs. Ethel Dunn of Victoria.

He was a member of Britannia Lodge No. 73, AF and AM, BCR, and also AOF court of Northern Light, Canadian Order of Foresters, Mizpah No. 2, Order of the Amaranth, and the International Typographical Union.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later by Sands Mortuary.

CENTENNIAL BLUES

B.C. Misses On U.S. Hits Say Singers

A long-play record being distributed by the B.C. Centennial Committee has revived the charge of American influence in provincial celebrations.

"Whoever thought of this should have his head examined," said Victoria singer Pierre Timp today.

'BAD JUDGMENT'

"I think it is bad judgment. We have lots of good talent in Canada. This should have been a Canadian effort. Why borrow from American artists?"

Mr. Timp, well known in city entertainment circles, is to be featured performer in the Norma Macdonald Memorial Show at McPherson Playhouse Monday.

Another well-known local singer Jock Dunbar said, "I think it's a darn disgrace." He said he wouldn't complain at the U.S. artists if the songs at least had something to do with B.C.

'SIGNIFICANT'

(An accompanying government press release said the 12 selections are "significant of the many moods" of B.C.)

Mr. Dunbar said this is worse than the suggestion some weeks ago that American producers he engaged to stage the Victoria celebrations.

He pointed out that a recording he had just completed. "Follow the Birds to Victoria" is being taken to California with a tourist booster crusade by B.C. Ferry assistant manager Ron Worley.

The Centennial Committee's record features such entertainers as Patti Page, Tony Bennett, The New Christie Minstrels, Frankie Laine Marty Robbins, Harry James and Percy Faith.

Selections include September Song, Long Ago and Far Away, Downtown (a British production), Lucky Old Sun, Cool Water and Cherry Pink and Apple Blossom White, among others.

12 at Uvic Win Major Awards

'Other Universities Will Envy Us'

The National Research Council has given 20 per cent of its 1966 awards for graduate study to students at the University of Victoria.

The high percentage means that one out of every seven B.Sc. graduates at Uvic this year will receive an NRC bursary.

Dr. Malcolm Taylor, university president, was delighted this morning.

"Other universities will envy us," he said.

Dr. Taylor said the large number of awards shows that Uvic ranks high in the quality of its undergraduate teaching

TUESDAY LUNCHEON

Dr. Taylor said the university will honor the winners of the NRC bursaries, and of four recently announced Woodrow Wilson Fellowships, at a luncheon next Tuesday in the Oak Bay Beach Hotel.

Twelve students at University of Victoria were given the $2,500 awards for advanced study. The purpose of the awards is to encourage science students to undertake graduate study

Another aim is to stop the so-called brain drain which every year sees bright Canadians go abroad for further study and work. NRC bursaries are for study at Canadian universities.

Outstanding among the NRC winners is Anthony Patriarche who only two weeks ago was awarded a Woodrow Wilson Fellowship. Mr. Patriarche, of 1377 Rockland, intends to do graduate work in medical biophysics at the University of Toronto.

Two other NRC winners only narrowly missed being given Woodrow Wilson Fellowships but were awarded honorable mentions. An honorable mention is considered a high academic honor in this field.

They are Roger Barnsley, 1400 Vancouver, and Christian Fibiger, 816 Blanshard. They are both psychology students. Mr. Barnsley intends to do graduate work at McGill and Mr. Fibiger is undecided as yet about his graduate study.

The other NRC winners and where they intend to study are as follows: Miss Sharon-Dale Brown, 117 Kingham Place, botany at University of Saskatchewan; S. D. Bulman-Fleming, 2630 Dalhousie, maths at Queen's University; A. J. Cleland, 3150 Midland Road, chemistry at McMaster.

J. C. Davis, 2637 Estevan, zoology at UBC; Miss Anthea Fisk, 907 Oliver, biology at UBC; J. A. J. Matthews, 2895 Ashley, theoretical physics at Toronto; A. R. W. McKellar, 3763 Cadboro Bay Road, physics at Toronto; R. W. McMillin, 1572 Athlone, maths at Queen's, and Rolf Turner of Fort Nelson, maths at Queen's.

The dinner to honor the award-winning students next week will be attended by Lieutenant-Governor George Pearkes and Judge J. B. Clearihue, chancellor of the university.

Examination Asked Before Pets Killed

Mandatory veterinary examination and advertising should be required in each instance before animals are destroyed by the SPCA, a legislative committee was told Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. James Barr, 965 Trans-Canada Highway, made the submission to the committee on behalf of the Cats Protection League.

They recounted one incident in which a one-eyed pet cat became lost from a temporary home while its owners were on vacation. It was picked up and destroyed by the SPCA.

Harry McKay (L — Fernie) said the requirement of a veterinarian's certificate and wide advertising would be impractical and exorbitant for a voluntary society.

David Beeching, Victoria SPCA manager, said $1,000 was spent for veterinary services and $300 for advertising last year.

He said he would be willing to meet the mandatory suggestion "if someone would donate the extra money needed for this."

Mr. Beeching added a peace officer and an SPCA official must concur before any animal is destroyed.

And advertising is used to try to locate an owner wherever possible, he said.

Ask The Times

Q. Is anyone over 70 or 80 years old allowed $1,500 without income tax?

X. Y. Z.

A. Yes, says the local income tax division of the revenue department.

Anyone born before 1900 is permitted $1,500 in earnings tax-free as well as the standard $100 deduction.

Q. Would the water level at the Gorge Bridge be the same as at the breakwater or Lagoon area at slack tide?

F. A. P.

A. Pretty well the same, says the hydrographic division, department of mines.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the problem along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

CLAIM FILED NEXT WEEK

Missing Witness Sued

The famous missing witness in the noisy, six-week highway graft probe that rocked the legislature three years ago is being sued by the man who started it all.

A Vancouver lawyer today said a statement of claim for damages alleging fraudulent misrepresentation will be filed next week against Burton Lymburner who never testified at the hearings despite an attempt to find him.

Dick Holzworth, a Helena, Mont., contractor who made allegations against Highways Minister P. A. Gaglardi that touched off the inquiry, Thursday night told the Times he found Mr. Lymburner in a Vancouver hotel and served him with the court writ.

The writ was issued two weeks ago by Chief Justice J. O. Wilson of B.C. Supreme Court and L. St. M. Du Molin, QC, Vancouver lawyer for Mr. Lymburner, has entered an appearance, putting the civic suit into motion.

A trial is not expected until December or January due to the preliminaries required and the busy Vancouver court schedule, Frank Harrop, counsel for Mr. Holsworth said.

The writ summarizes Mr. Holzworth's claim as a suit for an unstated amount as damages "for fraudulent misrepresentation and deceit arising from the sale of shares in L&M Logging Co. Ltd. to the plaintiff by the defendant with respect to Project 819 highway contract in or about March, 1958."

GAGLARDI CLEARED

Project 819—a stretch of the Trans-Canada Highway — was the central object of the 1963 legislative committee inquiry which cost $40,000 and cleared Mr. Gaglardi of any wrongdoing.

Mr. Holzworth at the time told MLAs he lost almost $200,000 when he took over the project from Mr. Lymburner's L & M firm, as a result of earlier irregularities on the contract.

Mr. Lymburner was sought by the committee as a witness in Canada and the United States but was not located and never appeared.

Mr. Harrop is a member of Mr. Dowding's legal firm.

MERGER VOTE SATURDAY

D for decision.

All property owners in the southern extension of the provincial territory may vote on the proposal to incorporate the area with Esquimalt.

Poll will be open at Craigflower Auto Court, 101 Island Highway, 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Young Naturalists Going to Bear Hill

The younger section of the junior branch of the Victoria Natural History Society will meet on Saturday at 1:30 p.m. at Douglas and Hillside for a field trip to Bear Hill, off Brookleigh Road.

The leader section will leave at 9:30 a.m. on Sunday for an expedition to Iron Mine Bay, East Sooke.

ALL THAT MESSY PAINTING HAS A POINT

KINDERGARTENS ARE BOOMING

'First and Last Chance to Foster Creativity'

By DESMOND BILL
Times Education Reporter

Shakespeare thought school was a place to which children went "creeping like snails, unwillingly."

Shakespeare evidently didn't know about kindergartens.

But then, even some parents of children who attend kindergartens don't know much about them.

Ask Mrs. Lynn Mills. She is a teacher at Lansdowne Cooperative.

She says some parents think kindergarten is a sort of glorified baby-sitting service. Others confuse it with school and can't understand why their children don't learn to read and write at it.

FASTEST GROWING

Actually, kindergartens are probably the fastest growing development in modern education.

Soon, a child will be underprivileged if he or she does not attend pre-school classes.

Already, children who do attend kindergarten have a better chance all through school years than those who don't receive some pre-school training.

Mrs. Mills is typical of the new breed of kindergarten teacher. It used to be the sort of job that went to dear old ladies who were supposed to have "a wonderful way with children."

But teachers such as Mrs. Mills study psychology and personality development, creative use of graphics and teaching methods in order to earn the certificate of a pre-school teacher.

She feels strongly about her work. "This is the first and last chance to foster creativity in children. Do you know why hardly any adults nowadays can paint? Because the creative ability was killed in them when they were children."

Drawing out and refining a child's creative instincts is the kindergarten approach. It is the point behind the messy painting and the generally relaxed atmosphere.

Says Mrs. Mills, "Children learn by feeling, seeing, tasting. It is a shock for them to be suddenly forced in school to learn in an abstract, verbal way. But through kindergarten they are gradually introduced to the learning process that they will encounter in school."

NOTHING FORCED

Mrs. Mills says the key to the kindergarten's success is that "nothing is forced. It is a fact that children develop at different speeds. They regress occasionally. We let them set their own pace."

She says she finds many parents anxious that their children be taught as soon as possible to read and write. "They never realize that forcing youngsters to learn to read too soon is the surest way to make them hate reading.

"A study not long ago showed that 75 per cent of the high school students who have reading problems are suffering from the effects of formal reading too early in life."

The emphasis on making education fit the child and not forcing the child to fit the educational format, results in youngsters who enjoy developing their own ability and intelligence.

Says Mrs. Mills: "The children in our kindergartens enjoy going to them. And they are learning there. When they go to school they have a receptive attitude to the educational experience there."

Parents Can Question The Experts at Workshop

Parents interested in the pre-school education of their youngsters will have the opportunity to attend a workshop Saturday, April 2, by the Vancouver Island Playgroup Association.

The workshop will give practical guidance and there will be opportunity for parents to question the experts.

The morning sessions will feature Mrs. Miriam Thomas talking about the Montessori Method of teaching young children. Also in the morning there will be a talk by Miss Ulha Jacobsen, kindergarten supervisor for the Greater Victoria School Board, on "What is happening in the public schools and why."

The afternoon session will feature a talk by Mrs. Roberta Emery on recent research and development in pre-school education. Mrs. Emery is co-ordinator of pre-school extension courses at University of Victoria.

The other afternoon speaker will be Miss Jean Day who will talk of the transition from pre-school to primary education. Miss Day is on the faculty of education at Uvic.

The workshop will be held from 9:30 to 3 at Stevenson Memorial Hall, 1792 Townley. Registration fee is $1.50 but persons may attend for part of the sessions.

Parents intending to go should register in advance by contacting Mrs. E. Cummins, 1288 Roy Road, at GR 9-2820.

IT'S HARD TO BELIEVE they are learning because they are so obviously enjoying themselves. But that is the secret of pre-school education in kindergarten. SHOPPING GUIDE

Delightful Newcomers Will Thrill the City

By Penny Saver

Two newcomers have arrived in town and my money is safe when I bet they'll be around a long time and widely received in thousands of homes!

Before you start thumbing through hotel registers, I should let you off the hook and tell you that the new arrivals don't qualify under the animal category . . . they're two of the finest salad dressings that have ever been concocted by a well-known company. With the two new ones, this firm produces close to 20 types, each guaranteed to leave your tastebuds trembling with pleasure.

Both the new dressings are homogenized and their taste is out of this world. I tried them on my family last night and never have I seen food disappear so quickly or with more relish!

The first of these "stars" is called Salad Secret. Spicy tomato paste and the mildest of blue cheese are added to its ingredients, giving it a blend that is sheer heaven in any gourmet's book.

If you've had trouble getting the youngsters to eat their luncheon sandwiches, try some of it on open-faced morsels—you'll be deluged with orders for "seconds"! It's also good served on citrus salads, combination fruit plates, chef, Julienne, meat, poultry or vegetable salads. Seafood appetizers receive an extra fillip when they're dressed up with this preparation and, used as a dip with fresh fruits and vegetables, it's the answer for the woman who craves to be the hostess with the mostest—with the minimum of effort.

The second "debutante" is Imperial Dressing and it really is a royal blend of garlic, herbs and spices that, because it's homogenized, will remain creamy, thick and smooth to the last drop. School children and their hungry Dads will vote you the cook of the year, if you add a dollop or two to those sizzling hot hamburgers they all love!

Eight-ounce bottles of these dressings sell for 35 cents each. Give your family a treat this weekend, try them, you'll not regret it. Give Penny a ring at 382-3131 if you want to know where to shop.

The Victoria Branch, Association for Childhood Education, is ushering in the new season in grand style. Monday evening the association is presenting the latest in fashion and hair styles for spring at a show beginning at 7:30 p.m. in Art Gallery of Greater Victoria. DEAR ABBY . . .

Sales Advice—Stay Behind the Counter

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My fiancee is a very attractive sales girl in a department store. Men customers very often ask her personal questions, such as, "What is your name?" "How old are you?" "Where do you live?" "Are you married?" She answers every question without hesitation. I tell her she should stick to selling, and not give the customers a run-down on her personal life, but she says she doesn't want to give the impression that she is stuck up. She carries on similar conversations with strangers she meets on the bus, or even on street corners. Do you think this is the proper way for a young lady to act? How should she answer personal questions from strangers?

DOWNTOWN VANCOUVER

DEAR DOWNTOWN: A young lady should ignore personal questions put to her by a stranger. Your fiancee could use an orientation course in the ways of the big city, and one in judo on the side.

DEAR ABBY: I am married, the mother of three, and my problem is my husband. I left him and filed for divorce only to call it off at the last minute because he cried and begged and promised he would be a good husband. So I went back to live with him again. I have no parents and no one to get advice from. Since I've been back he has been worse than ever. One minute he is fine and the next minute he is calling me every dirty thing he can think of. He goes into a rage, throws things, and ends up beating me. The only time he is half-civilized is when he wants marital relations. What am I to do? I am afraid of him. I haven't worked in years and couldn't support myself and the children. We have lost all our friends because of his vile temper and filthy accusations. If I leave him again I am afraid my life will be in danger. Is he sick?

NO MORE HOPE

DEAR NO MORE: Of course he's sick, but you're no doctor. Don't spend another night under the same roof with this man. If you can't hire a lawyer, call your local Legal Aid society.

DEAR ABBY: Do you think it is all right to go to mixed parties?

WINNIE

DEAR WINNIE: It all depends on what they're mixing.

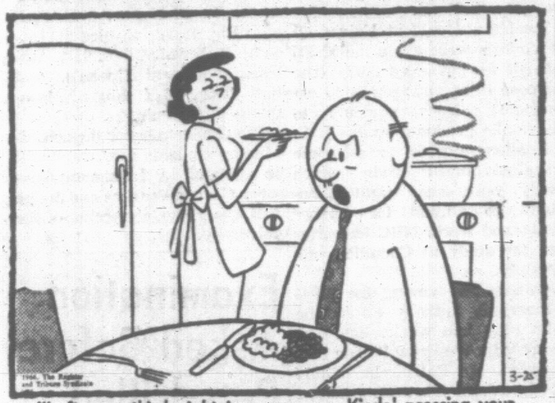
THE BETTER HALF By Bob Barnes



"Leftovers third night in a row . . . Kinda' pressing your luck, aren't you kiddo?"

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Q. With summer coming up I need a rapid answer to my problem. I'm 22 and have two children. I'm 5 feet 6 and still have a good figure, (36-23-35). But HELP! my upper legs are a sight! My thighs bulge with thick flab just below my hips for about six inches down my leg. This is terribly noticeable in shorts and slacks. I took dancing lessons throughout my teens and wonder if this could be the cause.

Lowman

A. Dancing might overdevelop the muscles, but it couldn't cause fatty deposits. The bulge you describe is often due to muscle slump plus deposits of fat. Do the following exercises.

Lie on your back with your legs straight and your arms out at your sides, palms toward floor. Keep your legs straight as you roll your hips from side to side. Roll as far in each direction as you can.

Lie on your left side. Brace yourself by putting your right hand on the floor in front of you. Raise your right leg up as far as comfortable and then lower it. Continue. After a while turn onto your right side and raise and lower your left leg.

Q. Is there any hope for a double chin that is already there? Would every day massage by hand help? What about a throat cream?

A. A double chin is usually due to poor posture and deposits of fat. Therefore you should try to improve your posture and lose any overweight if you have too many pounds. The following exercise will help you greatly improve the situation.

Lower your head backwards. Hold it that way while you chew in an exaggerated manner, opening your mouth wide. And pat a lubricating cream on your neck every night.

Q. I exercise daily in an effort to control my hips and waist. I have been quite successful. I find it extremely difficult, however, to keep my face thin. I am 26 years old, a male and in perfect health. What do you suggest?

A. There is no way to reduce the face except by a general loss of weight, and you do not seem to need that. However, you should NOT wear a crew cut, but rather have your hair high on top, a moderate pompadour. This will make your face appear slimmer.

Q. Is your "Eight-Week Improvement Plan" good for men as well as women?

A. This was really planned for women. However, most of the exercises and the calorie chart would be useful to men. I think you would like my Tubby Hubby Diet better.

RESIGNS IN PROTEST

Woman Mail Carrier

POWELL RIVER (CP) — The mail must go through, all right, but Mrs. Isabel Dawson has quit her mail-carrying contracts here in a dispute over whether it must go through a picket line.

Mrs. Dawson, a housewife, former Powell River good citizen of the year and Social Credit candidate in the 1963 provincial election, resigned after 11 years on the rural route.

The post office said Mrs. Dawson did not deliver mail during last year's postal workers' strike and has demanded she return the $58 it says she should not have been paid.

Mrs. Dawson said she is not a member of the postal workers' union. "But I fully support democratic union principles, of which the right to strike is one," she said.

AT MEETING OF ANGLICAN WOMEN

TALK BY UVIC STUDENT

Pray that Anglican university students may know what God wants them to do and keep the campus in mind in prayer were the two requests made by Peter Parker, a student at the University of Victoria, when he spoke to the first session of the three-day annual meeting of the Diocesan Board of the Anglican Church Woman's Auxiliary.

Speaking on the Anglican church on campus at the meeting in Christ Church Cathedral parish hall Tuesday, Mr. Parker told of the Canterbury Club, the Anglican student group at his university. Communion services and guest speakers were just part of the program offered, he said, and noted that personal fellowship was sought rather than "40-minute speeches" which the students are subjected to daily in class.

Delegates had been sent to the Student Christian Movement in Saskatoon, Sask., and also to the Older Boys' Parliament and had attended a 20th Century Folk Mass.

Mr. Parker noted that many of the students didn't know the meaning of the Anglican Church —should they join or compete with other church groups.

Mrs. T. Hughes, prayer partner secretary, introduced the speaker.

Rev. R. A. Hoult greeted the delegates and spoke on the doubts being expressed of the survival of the Anglican Church.

Also speaking were Mrs. G. R. V. Bolster, a life member, and Mrs. G. A. Moir, who noted the beginning of a Young Mothers' Branch of the auxiliary installed at St. John's Church, Duncan.

WOMEN'S PLACE

The place of women as the background of a nation was stressed by provincial vice-president Mrs. F. E. Anfield, Vancouver, who said that lasting changes are made by women. Unity in the church, she concluded, begins in oneself, to be able to give an account of oneself and one's beliefs.

In her report, president Mrs. F. A. Goodwin noted that 14 life memberships had been conferred during the year, and that membership had increased, with two new branches formed at Duncan and Port Hardy. She spoke of the difficulty in gaining officers for youth work, the unwillingness for leaders to step forward.

United thank-offering secretary Mrs. G. H. Greenhalgh announced that the sum of $3,872.12 had been received from branches and she commended the practice of sending the funds twice yearly. She told the delegates that new thank-offering boxes had been made of cardboard which are less expensive than those of former years and suggested their use by persons outside the WA.

The session began with the service of Holy Communion in the Cathedral, conducted by Archbishop Harold Sexton, who was assisted by Canon Hywel Jones, Rev. Hoult and Dean Brian Whitlow.

EXPLAINS FUND

During the evening session, Tuesday, of the three-day annual meeting, Mrs. E. R. Bagley, Toronto, explained the use of the Primate's World Relief Fund when she conducted a discussion on budget. Mrs. Bagley is dominion treasurer.

The fund, she said, is used immediately in cases of urgent need or disaster. At the end of the year, the surplus is distributed where necessary. Needs of the churches are accepted and aided in order of priority by the Anglican World Mission, the speaker continued. Budget for the year, she concluded was $474,848.

Guest speaker for the evening was Willard Ireland, provincial archivist and librarian, who stressed what the provincial centennial could and has to mean to the province.

He said that pioneering was not over, it is a thing of the spirit, and listed, giving examples, the three characteristics of the pioneers: The courage, willingness to work hard and faith in country, themselves and in God. Mr. Ireland punctuated his address with stories of pioneer women and stressed the element of courage needed in this century.

Delegates voted to accept the distribution of funds proposed by the finance committee and treasurer Miss Dora Brown, during Wednesday's session. Recommendations by the committee were also accepted.

Reports of their departments were discussed by a panel of Dorcas secretary Mrs. J. A. Andrews; church furnishings convener, Mrs. G. V. Jarvis, and social service secretary, Mrs. H. N. Street.

New officers for the board were elected during the Thursday session and Archbishop Sexton gave the closing address.

Members of the 1966 executive include Mrs. F. A. Goodwin, president; Mrs. H. McDonald, first vice-president; Mrs. H. E. Hubbard, second; Mrs. W. E. Greenhalgh, corresponding and united thank-offering secretary; Mrs. L. E. Small, recording; Miss Dora Brown, treasurer; Mrs. Andrews, Dorcas; Mrs. E. Lunny, candidates' secretary; Mrs. N. W. Life, educational; Miss Nona Butts, Girls' Auxiliary; Mrs. T. Hughes, prayer partner; Mrs. N. B. Fatt, Living Message; Mrs. C. T. Skinner, extra cents; Mrs. Street, social services; Miss Dorothea Lucas, chairman of Comox Deanery; Mrs. R. T. M. Dobell, Cowichan Deanery.

Appointed conveners are Mrs. R. O. Taylor and Miss Ella Beane, life members committee; Mrs. H. F. Ballantyne, G. A. Links, Mrs. Jarvis, church furnishings; Miss Edith Gollmer, book of remembrance and used stamps; Mrs. S. W. Davis, handicrafts; Mrs. H. Singleton, nominations committee; Mrs. L. H. Edwards, hospitality, and Mrs. J. H. Kaiser, registrar.

'Rushing' Party

The Smugglers' Cove Road home of Mrs. W. W. Lewis was the setting, recently, for a "rushing" coffee party given by members of Alpha Zeta Chapter, Beta Sigma Phi.

Mrs. R. Pettie greeted the guests which included Miss Joan Thompson, rushee; Mrs. J. R. Kingham, chapter social sponsor, and Mrs. K. Budd, city council president.

A buffet luncheon was served by Mrs. R. Grant, Mrs. B. Cliff and Mrs. R. Aylward, and Mrs. W. R. Clark and Miss Myrla Moyer presided at the refreshment table.

Irish Theme Used by Arbutus Club

It was an evening for the "wearin' o' the green" at the recent meeting of the Arbutus Toastmistress Club in the Blue Room. Theme for the meeting was "St. Patrick's Day" and everything from the little people to Irish history was discussed by the speakers.

Mrs. W. M. Howes was toastmistress for the evening and was introduced by Mrs. Peter Small. Speeches were given by Mrs. L. Reid, "The pride of former days;" Mrs. E. R. Ashbridge, "If I Were a Leprechaun;" Mrs. R. S. Butt, "What we should see in Ireland;" and Mrs. M. F. Dearman, "The Story of Ireland."

Speech evaluators were Mrs. R. S. Walls, Mrs. J. L. Brens and Mrs. H. Winstone, and Mrs. W. A. Ludlow evaluated the lesson on club membership given by Mrs. D. E. Pite.

Special guest at the meeting was Mrs. G. Macdonald who brought greetings from the Kilmarnock Toastmistress Club in Ayrshire, Scotland.

Reports on the 4-H speech contest were given by Mrs. Dearman and Mrs. Winstone. Topic mistress was Mrs. F. R. Pitt-Cross, who was introduced by Mrs. G. L. Cook.

General evaluator Mrs. G. H. Love presented the Spur to Mrs Small and the Oscar to Mrs. Butt and Mrs. D. L. Campbell gave the vote of thanks. Lexicologist was Mrs. J. W. Gillis.

ANNUAL LUNCHEON

Colwood Opening Has Fun, Sun and Flowers

"Just for fun" was the way ladies' captain Mrs. N. L. Morgan described the annual spring opening of the ladies' division Royal Colwood Golf and Country Club, Thursday. The members took her up on the idea, too, and the weatherman provided sunny skies for the event.

Early in the morning, more than 50 members gathered on the course to play a nine-hole round two-ball foursome before retiring to the clubhouse for sherry and conversation.

The lounge of the clubhouse wore its most festive spring face for the luncheon which followed. Daffodils, nestling in moss, centred the tables and a large arrangement of daffodils was the highlight of the head table. Seated at the latter with the ladies' captain, Mrs. Morgan, and vice-captain. Mrs. R. E. Rickinson, was guest speaker Mrs. Joan Riley, Lower Vancouver Island representative for the Canadian Ladies' Golf Association. Travelling from Nanaimo for the opening were Mrs. T. A. P. Jackson and Mrs. A. B. Hall.

Following the luncheon of chicken a la king, Mrs. Riley spoke on the forthcoming competitions coming up in the Victoria and provincial area and discussed the three levels, local. provincial and national, of competitive golf.

Medal spoons, awarded by the CLGA, were presented to Mrs. V. Wyley and Mrs. O. Painter for the business women's division and to Mrs. E. Anderson and Mrs. E. Hay for the week-day division. Presentations were made by Mrs. Hay and Mrs. Morgan.

Winners of the morning's game were Mrs. H. Thorburn and Mrs. M. Coxford and runners-up were Mrs. T. A. P. Jackson and Mrs. A. Dawson.

Married 50 Years

Mr. and Mrs. Raleigh Brooks entertained at a reception, Saturday, for Mr. Brooks' brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Brooks, who were celebrating their golden wedding anniversary. The honor couple was married in Edmonton on March 22, 1916, and first made their home in Vermilion, Alta. Before moving to Victoria in 1941, they lived in Stoney Plain, Alta., and Edson, Alta. Attending the reception were the couple's son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Brooks, Carolyn and Geraldine of Vancouver, and their daughter, Mrs. Normand Campbell (Marguerite), and Ricky, Victoria. Also attending were Mr. and Mrs. Bert Quist, Mr. Brad Quist, Mr. William Brooks and Mr. Reginald Brooks, all of Edmonton; Mrs. Joseph Brown and Neil of New Serepta, Alta.; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Rowse of Vancouver, and Mrs. Theo Scargill, North Vancouver.

Final Fling

Close to 300 University of Victoria students and their friends are expected to attend "The Last Tea Party", being held at the new Club Tango this evening. The semi-formal dance is one of the last social affairs to be arranged before students start writing year-end examination next month. The Coachmen, a five-piece orchestra of university students, will play for dancing. The get-together is being arranged by Mr. Hugh McDonald and Mr. Jay Wilson.

Irish Theme

The Oak Bay Beach Hotel was decorated in an Irish theme, recently, when a number of nursing sisters were entertained at a smorgasbord dinner. There were 43 guests at the affair convened by Miss Elvira Nordlund.

Quiet Ceremony

Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Barrick, 1869 Gonzales Avenue, announce the recent marriage of their daughter, Irene, to Mr. Stuart G. Pitt, Vancouver, son of the late Mrs. Margaret Pitt, Victoria. The quiet wedding took place on Monday in Fairfield United Church with Rev. H. W. Kerley officiating. The couple is now making their home in Vancouver.

Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Leon Shaffer, St. Charles Street, celebrated their 30th wedding anniversary, Tuesday, with a dinner party in Hy's Steak House. Attending the affair were their son, Mr. Cyril (Zip) Shaffer and their daughter, Cookie; Mr. and Mrs. B. Meyers. Mr. and Mrs. V. Ford, Mr. and Mrs. R. Krasney, Mr. and Mrs. J. Krasney, Mr. and Mrs. A. Libby, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Greene, Mrs. L. Conn, Mr. Cyril Boyes, Mrs. Helen Alexander and Miss Michele Conn. Out-of-town guests at the dinner were Mr. and Mrs. Bill Libby of Vancouver and Mr. and Mrs. Marcoe of Regina.

Complexion Care

The secret of beautifying the complexion is said to be in the saturation of the skin with a new type of moisturizer. The skin should take on an immediate healthy bloom as the tiny lines and blemishes are gently smoothed away. This saturation treatment with the moisturizer known as CEF 600 and CEF 1200 in double strength, is recommended by beauty care consultants who also recommend its daily use as a powder base to give the complexion day-long beauty treatment. Generalization on Inflation Scares Many Economists

By KEN SMITH
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Despite widespread concern about rising prices and other pressures in the Canadian economy, few economists are ready to describe today's situation as over-all inflation.

Instead, many prefer to focus on specific problems while emphasizing that the structure of the country's economy is basically sound.

A Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press shows that many fear undue concentration on general inflation could prod the government into imposing too-tight restraints, ending further immediate growth and threatening to bring about a serious downturn.

"I personally don't like the words "inflation' or 'inflationary pressures' because of the emotional aspects of them," says Forrest Rogers, economist with the Bank of Nova Scotia in Toronto. "When people hear them they tend to think of a serious, runaway problem."

While no one is saying Canada is facing a runaway problem, there has been growing concern about stresses that have appeared—rising costs, shortages of labor and materials in some key sectors and a lag in the expected increase of industrial productivity.

INVESTMENT RISING

This worry was underlined by the two recent unsuccessful motions of non-confidence moved against the federal government because of what the opposition termed its failure to tackle economic problems properly.

Then, the day after the votes were taken, Trade Minister Winters tabled a report in the Commons forecasting new capital investment in Canada this year at a record $14,546,000,000 — an increase of 13.6 per cent over 1965.

It would come on the heels of gains of 16 to 17 per cent in the last two years—and construction is the area cited most frequently as being seriously overheated.

Mr. Winters noted this in saying:

"To forestall the further buildup of demand pressures, there is need for reasonable restraint on the part of all groups concerned in embarking upon new projects, particularly those not urgently required to improve efficiency or expand industrial capacity."

Last August Prime Minister Pearson announced a deferral of some government capital spending and called on private industry to follow.

The forecast by Mr. Winters makes it obvious the call has had little effect.

DOLLAR DWINDLES

The problems of costs, shortages and productivity are not in themselves inflation, but they are inflationary in nature since they tend to push up prices without necessarily producing an equivalent increase in output.

That in effect reduces the value of money, since every time prices go up the dollar buys less. If this inflation gets completely out of hand, currency can become worthless.

In theory, these inflationary pressures can be nipped in the bud easily by causing a reduction in demand. If demand is dampened too much, however, the economy suddenly swings from expansion to decline.

While these over-simplified principles are accepted, economists differ in their emphasis on how to achieve a balance between acceptable growth and unwanted inflation.

They even differ on what the balance should be.

Stewart Wells, research director for the Non-operating Railway Unions in Montreal, says for example that a few years ago prices in Canada rose by only a half of one per cent in a year. But because the economy was stagnating, basically because of lack of demand, unemployment was running eight per cent or more.

PENSIONS AFFECTED

"The social cost of that unemployment far exceeds the social cost of the inflation we're seeing today with our high employment," he says.

"Obviously, the three-percent price inflation we had last year hurts fixed-income groups such as pensioners. But there are other ways of dealing with pensioners—we adjust their pensions.

"And I personally can't see screwing down the whole economy just to keep pensions stable."

On the other hand, a Toronto bank official — who asked he not be quoted by name—says the situation now is serious and could be alarming within a year.

"Essentially we've been trying to do too much and the economy just can't do it," he says.

This difference in emphasis is reflected to a degree in two recent official reports—the second report of the Economic Council of Canada and the annual report of the Bank of Canada.

Both recognize and warn of the pressures in the economy, but the economic council tends to plump more for increasing supplies, instead of reducing demand, to re-establish equilibrium than does the Bank of Canada.

With a vigorous call for improving education — skilled manpower is possibly the key factor in helping to fill the supply side — the economic council notes "little evidence to indicate that a broad and widely dispersed acceleration of price increases or accentuation of price pressures is under way."

The bank of Canada report, however, notes seam-straining capital investment by both government and private business and free-wheeling consumer spending and adds:

"In these circumstances the aggregate of all demands on the Canadian economy may outrun the effective capacity of the economy to increase its output of goods and services.

"In short, we run the risk of overloading the economy."

Here are some other economists' thoughts on the question.

R. B. MacPherson of Du Pont of Canada Ltd. in Montreal: If any anti-inflationary measures are adopted by the government "they should be very moderate indeed."

"Supply and productive capacity in Canada are inadequate to meet demand so the approach should be to find ways of expanding productive capabilities with much less emphasis placed on curtailing demand. . . . Curtailing demand leads to curtailing employment. . . . The need is for expanded investment and production."

OPPOSES CURBS

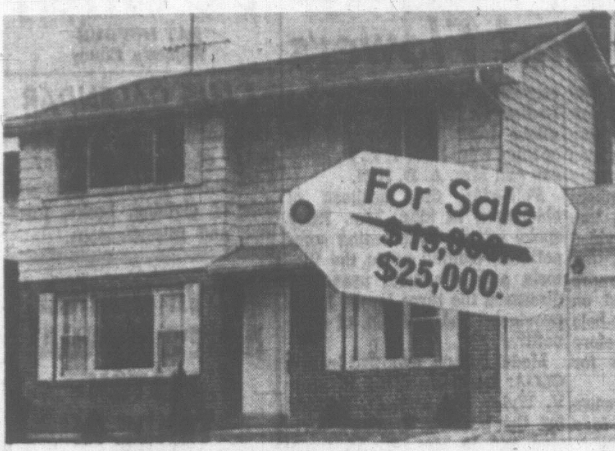
H. J. Waisglass, research director for the United Steelworkers Union (CLC): "We have to recognize where the pressures are coming from and act on them. Restrictions on demand now would be a negative reaction. There are a few spotty areas of shortages, so what must be done is to emphasize supply in these areas. We must accelerate mobility of labor from low-wage and unemployment areas to areas of labor shortages."

Mr. Rogers: "I see no reason why these problems can't be attacked selectively. At the government level, for example, spending should be held back. Another would be to reduce the degree of expenditures in private capital expansion through either increased corporation tax or lowered depreciation allowances. . . . The important thing now is flexibility, so the economy can be restrained or stimulated quickly as the needs change."

Dr. Joseph J. Vorstermans of Nova Scotia's St. Mary's University: "The economy is buoyant and people have more money. We have a choice of two evils—either we have a buoyant economy with high prices and high employment or we reverse the scale."

W. H. Pugsley, associate professor of management at the school of commerce at McGill University: The demand situation increased the pace of the economy, and then there was "more demand before an increase in output, so prices go up and it looks even more profitable and we do more. The best protection against severe inflation is early increases in output."

Dr. N. Hurwit, associate economics professor at Newfoundland's Memorial University: "The only effective method of correction I have ever seen is some sort of government control." The cause of the inflationary pressures was simply a buoyant economy but "some steps must be taken to curb the inflation in certain lines" if it reaches the point where the lower-income segment of the population is being hurt.



FEAR OF INFLATION accompanies the steady rise in prices in Canada. This is a four-bedroom home in suburban Toronto. It sells for $25,000. In 1957, the same house in a similar location sold for about $19,000.

Judge Gets Ranting Letter In Bribe Trial of Denis

OTTAWA (CP)—Charges of unfair tactics by the Crown and a judicial admonition to jurors to report anyone getting in touch with them marked a new stage in the Raymond Denis trial Thursday.

Defence Counsel Louis Assaly said he was "shocked, astounded and infuriated at the conduct of the Crown" in an outburst over the questioning of a witness, Montreal salesman Guy Masson.

Judge Frank Costello of Kitchener stepped in to tell Mr. Assaly:

"When I said to you on a previous occasion to 'save it for the jury' I didn't mean you should take it as direction (an order)."

Shortly before that, Judge Costello had informed the jury he received a letter Thursday morning "uncomplimentary to just about everyone" connected with the trial, including the lawyers, accused and witnesses.

"If you should get any communications, written or verbal, I would ask you to bring them in and hand them to the sheriff, being careful not to smudge any latent fingerprints."

The testimony of Mr. Masson centred on a meeting with Denis in Hull, Que., June 22, 1964, and certain events preceding it, including an encounter between Masson, Robert Gignac, Eddie Lechasseur and Marie Rivard.

Denis is charged with corruptly offering a sum of money to Montreal lawyer Pierre Lamontagne to have Mr. Lamontagne drop opposition to bail for narcotics smuggler Lucien Rivard.

Mr. Lamontagne has testified Denis relayed an offer of $20,000 July 14, 1964, and he refused it.

Denis then was executive assistant to the federal immigration minister and Mr. Lamontagne was lawyer for the United States government which was trying to have Rivard extradited to stand trial in the U.S.

The defence protested Thursday against any testimony being placed before the jury about events which occurred outside Denis' presence. The trial started Feb. 14.

GOES TO HULL

Mr. Masson told of driving to Hull from Montreal with Gignac, his boss, to see Denis, as a result of the meeting with Gignac, Lechasseur and Mrs. Rivard.

When Assistant Crown Attorney Robert Vincent asked whether Mr. Masson received anything before going to Hull, Mr. Assaly protested heatedly.

Mr. Vincent asked why Mr. Masson arranged the meeting with Denis, and again Mr. Assaly objected.

After delivering his "save-it-for-the-jury" remark, Judge Costello told the jurors the trial related solely to whether Denis offered a bribe. The court wasn't concerned with things connected only with the Rivard case.

Gigg Named To Command Sub Squadron

Commander Edmund Gigg, former commander of the Esquimalt-based submarine HMCS Grilse, has been chosen to command the first submarine squadron on the east coast.

The first submarine to join the new squadron will be the Canadian "O" class boat, HMCS Ojibwa. Two more subs are under construction in Britain.

Commander Gigg, 41, brought the Grilse to the west coast after it was commissioned in Groton, Conn., in 1961.

60 COUNTRIES 'BLACKLIST' RHODESIA

UNITED NATIONS (Reuters) — Sixty countries have informed the United Nations they do not recognize the breakaway regime in Rhodesia and have severed trade relations, it was learned Thursday.

The countries sent letters to the UN setting forth the steps taken to conform with resolutions of the Security Council condemning the unilateral declaration of independence from Britain Nov. 11, 1965, and calling for economic sanctions, including an oil embargo, against the regime in Salisbury.

DOCTORS MUST MEET CHALLENGE, SAYS PRESIDENT

'Public Expects Too Much From Us'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dr. Robert Kerr, president of the Canadian Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons, said Thursday night the public expects too much from the medical profession.

"We as a profession must educate the public as to our limitations as well as our capabilities," Dr. Kerr, head of the department of medicine at the University of British Columbia and medical head at the Vancouver General Hospital, told 326 members of the Vancouver Medical Association.

He was delivering the 46th annual Osler lecture, given in memory of the pioneer Canadian medical teacher and philosopher, Sir William Osler.

Dr. Kerr said that only 60 years ago the public was "indifferent" to medical science. But this has changed to an attitude of "intense interest" in which people have tended to feel doctors can do almost anything.

"Medicine has become everyone's business," he told the doctors. The medical profession must face this challenge with "a factual, non-sensational program of public information" on the extent of medical capabilities.

He chastized doctors for being naive in public relations.

Because medicine has become so much part of the public platform, the medical profession needs to develop specialists conversant with medical issues and able to present the doctors' case, Dr. Kerr asserted.

FBI Seeks Matador

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bullfighter Robert Clayton Buick has become the first of his profession to make the FBI's select list of 10-most-wanted fugitives. That's because, the FBI said Thursday, when he isn't bullfighting, he's bank robbing.

Try Bonded Stock on a friend without letting him see the label.

It's the best way to find out what people really think about a whisky: how do they like it when they don't know which brand they're drinking?

If you've tried Bonded Stock yourself, the playback won't surprise you. Bonded Stock is a great Canadian whisky. You can conceal the label but you can't disguise the flavour. It's an extremely mellow whisky with a deceptively smooth flavour that dyed-in-the-wool whisky drinkers love.

So if you know someone who buys whisky by labels, introduce him to flavour.

RAPID PROGRESS made by Scott, one of Canada's widely-publicized thalidomide babies, in his bid to walk is shown in these pictures. The active four-year-old, who lost both his legs below the knees, is being treated at a London, Ont., centre. Doctors predict he will be able to participate in minor sports. His first progress was on temporary limbs called "pylons" (left) and from there he went to artificial limbs. They cost $850 and will have to be changed every 12 to 18 months until he is grown. OVER JURY DUTY FOR CLERICS

'Church and State Issue' Looms

The current dispute over the B.C. government's Jury Amendment Act which would make clergymen liable for jury duty could mushroom into a larger issue, warns the Victoria Council of Churches.

The council, which recently asked the government to include a conscience clause in the act to exempt clergymen from jury duty, commented further today in a prepared statement.

Continued absence of a conscience clause may produce "a highly embarrassing situation if a clergyman were summoned to serve on a jury and refused on conscientious grounds to do so.

"This could be a church and state issue of some gravity," the council adds.

The act, which would make the clergy liable for jury service, was passed in 1964 but has not yet been put into effect.

Objections to jury duty may be based on conscientious objections to capital punishment and anything leading to it, the council's statement says.

"This objection might be felt by any citizen, lay or clerical," the council adds.

HIS FUNCTION

Another possible objection lies on the ground that a clergyman's function in society—"as a confessor and pastor of souls"—makes jury duty unfitting for him.

The council also states that the government "has no right" to remove the clergy's exemption from jury service without consultation with the church.

Many clergy have no conscientious objection to sitting on juries, but on the contrary welcome the opportunity to serve the public in this way, says the council.

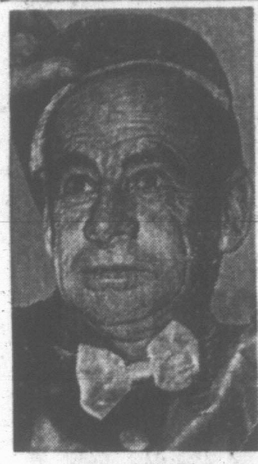
But some clergy do have conscientious objections, it added.

SCHOOL TRUSTEES

Persons objecting to exemptions for clergy from civic duties "cannot logically support the government's continued refusal to allow clergy the right to serve as school trustees," the council states.

"The clergy are keen to do their duty to society and can lay claim to a good record in this respect.

"The question for them is not whether to serve society, but whether service on a jury is a form of service compatible with the special character of their work and calling."



LONGDEN

Celebrities Guests Of Province

A movie star and a sports star will be guests at a B.C. government luncheon in Los Angeles March 28.

The affair, part of a promotion to attract tourists here from California, will be attended by MGM actor Glen Ford and veteran jockey Johnny Longden.

The recently retired Mr. Longden will receive a presentation from B.C. Ferries' manager Ronald Worley on behalf of Premier Bennett.

The gift will commemorate Longden's feat in riding the B.C.-bred George Royal to victory in the San Juan Capistrano Handicap. It was the "winningest jockey's" last race.

The California promotion will last March 28 to April 2, during which time 25 British Columbians will speak to 111 California clubs and associations and appear on TV and radio, extolling this province.

Chief Nursing Officer To Visit Victoria

The chief nursing officer for St. John Ambulance in Canada will make her first official visit to Victoria Wednesday.

She will address the senior nursing divisions here at St. John House at 8 p.m. She will be accompanied by Mrs. P. Johnson, provincial superintendent of nursing.

PUBLIC INVITED

Special Lectures On B.C. Centennial

The public is invited to attend three special centenary lectures about British Columbia presented by the Alumni Association of University of Victoria.

The first lecture, April 4, will feature Dr. Hugh Keenleyside, co-chairman of B.C. Hydro, speaking on the potential of hydro-electric development in B.C.

On April 18 the problems and possibilities of automation in B.C. will be discussed by a panel. Taking part will be Dr. I. D. Pal, economics professor at Uvic, E. P. O'Neal, secretary-treasurer of the B.C. Federation of Labour, and businessman A. L. Speight.

The series will end April 25 when newsman-historian James K. Nesbitt will outline the political history of the province over the past 100 years.

The time and place of each lecture is 8:30 p.m. in the main lounge of the Students' Union Building on the Gordon Head campus.

City Finals Tonight

Annual Golden Gavel speaking competition city finals will be held tonight at 8 in St. John Ambulance auditorium, 941 Pandora.

There are eight finalists. The event is open to the public.

Repeat China Film

A repeat showing of Felix Greene's film "China" will be held at McPherson Playhouse Sunday at 6:30 p.m. and 8:30 p.m. Tickets are now on sale at the box office. The film is sponsored by Voice Of Women.

STUDYING $270,000 collection of 7,000 rare and scientific books recently purchased by University of B.C. are Dr. William Gibson (foreground), medical historian, and other UBC officials. Letters by Florence Nightingale were in collection. (CP Wirephoto.)

Nightingale Letters Open To Public

VANCOUVER (CP)—It may not be polite to read a lady's private mail, and even less polite to put it on exhibit, but a professor at the University of British Columbia is cheerfully planning to do just that.

Dr. William Gibson of the history of medicine and science department at UBC found several letters written by Florence Nightingale in a $270,000 collection of rare letters and papers which arrived at the university this week.

He gave no indication what the letters deal with.

Also included in the collection is a small red chalk drawing of a chimpanzee which many experts have attributed to Rembrandt. It is in a volume written by Rembrandt's physician, Nicholaas Tulp. If it is an authentic Rembrant, it could be worth up to $10,000.

SAD MONKEY

"You should see the poor little thing," said Dr. Gibson. "Rembrandt, if it was Rembrandt, had to pick the saddest-looking monkey possible. He looks as if he's had five or six too many."

He said the collection is arriving in 65 tea chests. It formerly belonged to Oxford lecturer Dr. Hugh Sinclair. Money for the collection was donated by lumberman H. R. MacMillan.

Police Were Looking

A man who drank beer on Carleton Terrace, March 4, while police were looking on was fined $50 in central court Thursday.

Ervin Eric Spill, 521 Johnson, pleaded guilty to consuming liquor in a public place.

Court was told police observed him reach into a parked car and drink from an opened bottle of beer beside the vehicle.

Also find $50 for the same offence was Robert Taylor, 1531 Jubilee. He was caught drinking beer in a car parked on Napier Lane, March 5.

Talent Show Tonight

Talent show in "living stereo" will be held tonight at 7:30 at Centennial United Church hall.

Fourteen acts will participate and sounds of the show will reach the audience through dual sound systems, a relatively recent stage development.

VANCOUVER LITTLE THEATRE

Difficult Play Wins High Praise

By JACK BRAUCKMANN

VANCOUVER (CP) — Adjudicator Peter Boretski had to elevate his critical powers Thursday night to evaluate the performance by Vancouver Little Theatre Association in the Dominion Drama Festival reginal finals here.

The Winnipeg actor, director and teacher said he was criticizing the Vancouver group's presentation of August Strindberg's The Father "on a higher plane" than the previous two festival offerings this week.

He said the group performed well "a play that needs great attention to detail, sheer realism in its presentation—a very difficult play to do."

He complimented the group for attempting the play in what he thought was the first time in Canada.

Mr. Boretski—telling the audience he was being intentionally hypercritical because of the calibre of the production—praised the set, props and costumes.

"But I was incensed with the director—who let us sit through a two-hour, 15 minute production without an intermission. Three acts and no break."

The adjudicator was impressed with the "very fine" performance of Peter Jaenicke as a Swedish army captain whose mental stability is undermined by his wife in a battle over who should guide their young daughter's life.

Mr. Boretski said Christine Green's portrayal of old Margret, a nurse who had continued to look after the captain since he was an infant, was "a beautiful study of love and loyalty."

Not so fortunate was Barbara Dahlquist, the female lead as the captain's wife, Laura.

"This evil woman became evil too soon. She let the audience get ahead of the story. Her attacks were too sudden and gave away the plot."

And the daughter was played by "one too old for the role," Duzanne Bowden as Bertha. "She was too hysterical—her performance not delineated."

Fine in support, Mr. Boretski said, were Frank Crowson as the doctor who confirmed the captain's insanity; Jon Pallone as Nojd, a subaltern; and John Read as a pastor and friend to the family.

Tonight's performance in the five-entry festival will be given by the Terrace Little Theatre and the final night's play Saturday by the Campus Players of the University of Victoria.

The five B.C. entries will be compared with entries in Saskatchewan and Alberta. Mr. Boretski will choose two of the entries from the three provinces for competition in the Dominion finals in Victoria in May.

Contest Winners

First prize in a poster contest held in conjunction with a PTA Mexican Festival at Margaret Jenkins School went to David Richardson. Michael Chapman took second prize, and Andrew Fry, third. Receiving honorable mention were submissions by Paul Jenkins, Mark Blaney, Kevin Poole and Debbie Johnstone.

Two TV Sets Stolen

City police are on the lookout for two television sets believed to have been stolen during shipping.

The sets, which have an aggregate value of $617, could have been taken recently from Canadian National Railways sheds in either Victoria or Vancouver, police said.

BRIDGE LESSON

By JACOBY AND SON

Another time when you do not play third hand high occurs when you want to make it possible for your partner to lead your suit if he can get back in the lead later on.

Opening lead—♠ 8.

Many players would open a heart in spite of their partner's spade overcall and once in a while would be rewarded by striking oil in the form of the right three hearts in partner's hand. This West was one of those old-fashioned players who believes in opening his partner's suits so he led the eight of spades.

This gave East the chance to set the hand by a play of third hand low and he proceeded to make the play. Of course, he didn't play his lowest spade. Instead he played the nine spot. He wasn't going to win the trick with the nine but he was able to convey the message that he wanted a further spade play if his partner ever gained the lead.

The opportunity for this type of play arises frequently. This specific example is a very obvious one. East doesn't see much chance to beat three no-trump in any case. He does not know that his partner holds the queen of diamonds and king of clubs. East can't see much chance but he can see no chance at all if he goes up with a high spade right away.

It always pays to give the cards a chance. By ducking, East did just that and was rewarded by picking up a 100-point penalty instead of paying off to a successful three no-trump contract.

TROUBLE-FREE 4-PLEX
$24,900

16 years old, this "up to snuff" investment is for the person who doesn't want heating and hydro bills and tenant problems. IT IS NOT A CONVERSION. It's really two side-by-side duplexes ajoined together giving SEPARATE FRONT AND BACK ENTRANCES for your tenants, WITH THEM PAYING ALL UTILITIES. This one you can leave when you go on your vacation and be sure of no big problems. It is presently renting at $65 per unit which in my opinion is cheap. Situated in THE PANDORA-QUADRA area close to everything. THE VENDOR SAID SELL IT, AND SHE WILL TAKE AS LOW AS $5,000 DOWN AND I WILL TRY TO CARRY AS LOW AS $210 P.I.T., OR TRY YOUR TRADES, GOOD MORTGAGE, OR A HOUSE IN SIDNEY, BRENTWOOD AREA, OR WATERFRONT LOT.

I NEED a new owner to furnish the LOVING care my widowed owner USED to give me. I am on an 80' lot with FRUIT TREES, SHRUBS, BUSHES, BULBS and PERENNIALS GALORE with wonderful soil. I was built by a ship's carpenter and that means solid. I have a LOVELY living room with BAY WINDOW and fireplace, two NICE bedrooms, 4-piece bath, MARVELLOUS kitchen, big utility room with cupboards, a blacktop driveway to a separate garage. The price has been cut $500 to find me another proud owner.

Andy Stephen Looks at TV

George Gobel, who next month makes his fourth appearance on the Dean Martin show, is now doing both radio and television commercials for four different companies.

Stephen

So what? So plenty! Those commercials, especially the television blurbs, mean money for the performer.

Television commercials are accounting for a third of the income of the Screen Actors Guild. They earned over $33,553,000 of a total income of close to $100 million from television commercials alone.

Every commercial producer in Hollywood reports business up 25 per cent over last year. In fact, new production studios are being opened to take care of the commercial business coming their way.

Television commercial production has also meant more work for actors.

To meet the demand, there has also been a great increase in agency activity. Similarly, there has been a rise in casting interests.

The way-out comedy is on the way out. The Munsters has been axed, The Addams Family is on the brink of the lop and other way-out comedies are in the shaky bracket.

So, they've come to an end after a short span of two years.

This is indicative that while people need some small amount of escapism in their lives, they also feel need for some form of identification. As a result, the naturalistic comedy will continue to make itself felt on the scene.

NBC-TV has emphatically stated that Roger Miller is on next season's schedule and was never taken off. There were disputes in terms of the contract between the folksinger and the network, but they have apparently been cleared up to allow Miller to star in his own show next fall.

SHOPPING SPREE FOR GERDA

PARIS (AP)—Gerda Munsinger, a leading figure in a Canadian sex-and-security affair, spent a few hours in Paris today for beauty treatments and dress fittings.

She declined to make a statement on the Canadian controversy. She said, however, that she has never been a spy.

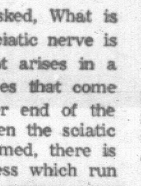
Several Reasons For Sciatic Pain

By DR. ALVAREZ

I am often asked, What is sciatica? The sciatic nerve is the big one that arises in a number of nerves that come out of the lower end of the spinal cord. When the sciatic nerve gets inflamed, there is pain and soreness which run down the back of the thigh. Sometimes there is a severe back pain and symptoms that suggest the presence of a ruptured disc.



Alvarez

A disc is a rubber-like pad that lies between two vertabras (the bones that make up the spinal column). When a disc ruptures, scraps of the spongy material come out and go into the spinal cavity, where they can press on the nerves, thus causing the pain of sciatica. In some cases, the inflammation of the sciatic nerve can be due to arthritis in the spine, or perhaps to a virus which has attacked the nerve.

Fortunately, the disease often quiets down with good physiotherapy — heat and massage. If it is to a marked destruction of a disc, an operation may have to be performed, to remove the material that is pressing on the nerve and causing the trouble.

Someone writes to say that suddenly one day recently, as he was eating some hot food, he got an almost unbearable jab of pain in a tooth. The dentist X-rayed it and said it looked all right, but ever since then, eating hot food has brought torture to him. What is wrong?

Almost certainly, he has a dying pulp (the inner part of the tooth) under a filling. If the dentist will only drill down to that pulp, he will find it smells bad. When he takes out the pulp, and fills the root canals, the pain will be gone.

A melanoma is a black tumor. It occurs sometimes on the fingers or toes or in crotch. It is often a highly malignant type of cancer. If I had a child with such a little tumor, I would have it quickly cut out by a surgeon. Why? Because often, when a melanoma becomes inflamed and starts to enlarge, it is very hard to cure. Fortunately, of late, some able surgeons have been reporting a very encourging percentage of cures.

Many a person is blind today because when a chip of metal flew into one eye, this chip was not immediately taken out. Also, by the time it was obvious that sight in the injured eye was lost, for some strange reason sight started to go in the other eye, and soon it was gone. This is called sympathetic ophthalmia, and is dreaded by eye specialists.

This is why no man in his senses should ever work in a machine shop where chips of metal can fly through the air, without goggles to protect his eyes.

Interestingly, Braille, the man who invented the raised dot letters now so much used by the blind, was blinded in a strange way. As a boy he was so near-sighted that when he tried to bore a hole through a piece of leather, he held the awl so close to his face that when it slipped, it went into one eye. This eye was blinded, and soon the other eye went blind with sympathetic ophthalmia.

HE GIVES AWAY GRAND PRIZES

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a Hammond Atlas or Globe.

Andy sends a complete, 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Edward Hsi, age 9, of Park Forest, Ill., for his question:

How does man measure the wind?

A flapping flag can show you which way the wind is blowing. The weatherman may use a gadget called a vane to check its direction. It may be a simple weather vane with an arrow that the wind blows around. A more fancy vane may have clockwork machinery to note the breezes that blow this way and that. There may be a mechanical pen to write the changes of direction on a slowly turning roll of graph paper.

Measuring the speed of the wind is different from measuring its direction. This trick is based on the strength of the wind. The wind, as we know, is moving air, and as it moves it pushes against things in its path. You can even feel a gentle breeze pushing against your face. The pressure from a gale wind can break boughs off trees and blow shingles off roofs. There is just one difference between the strong gale and the gentle breeze. A strong wind blows faster than a weak breeze.

What's more, its exact strength depends upon its exact speed. A gentle breeze blowing at 10 miles an hour can flap a small flag, rustle the leaves and bend the twigs. A fresh breeze of 20 miles an hour can bend sapling trees and ruffle a lake with wavelets. It is twice as strong as the 10-mile-an-hour breeze.

Clocks Hurricane Winds

We cannot measure the wind by running along with it or clock the leaves as it blows them around. But we can measure its strength. When we know how hard it blows, we can figure how fast it must be blowing. The weatherman uses a gadget called an anemometer to clock the wind. The long word anemometer is easy when you remember that the pretty anemone is the wind flower and that a meter is a measurer. An anemometer is just a wind measurer. It may have three metal cups set on top of a metal pole. The wind blows into the hollows and whirls the cups around and around. The faster they spin, the faster the wind is blowing. The anemometer has a clockwork gadget to translate this pressure into speed. It may also have clockwork to write the wind speed record onto a revolving drum.

There are other instruments for measuring the speed of the wind—but all of them do the job by first measuring the strength with which it blows. They can clock hurricane winds of 75 miles an hour and tornado winds of more than 100 miles an hour. But so far we have no anemometer to clock the wildest winds that blow. Raging winds of 200 miles an hour or more are so strong that all the weathermen's instruments are whipped to pieces.

Andy sends a 15-inch World Book Globe to Mary Jean Macca, age nine, of Omaha, Neb., for her question:

Why should we breathe through our noses instead of our mouths?

You have eyes to see and ears to hear, legs to walk and run and hands to do a million different things. You know about these parts of your body and how to use them. But your body has other parts for other jobs that you know nothing about. You cannot tell it how to make its blood or digest your food. The body is truely a wonder with many small parts working together for different jobs.

Naturally you want to keep your body in good working order. You keep it clean and give it sensible food. It plans for you to breathe in through your nose so that is what you do. This is sensible because the nose is a sort of filter. It sifts out some of the dusty dirt from the air before it goes inside to your lungs. The tunnels in the back of your nose take the chill from frosty air. If you breathed through your mouth, the air going to your lungs would be dustier and often colder.

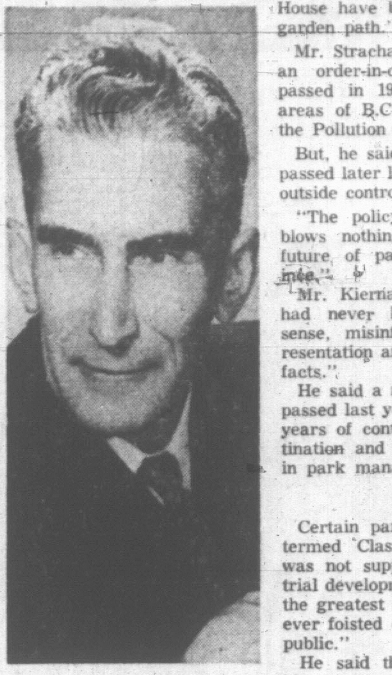
STRACHAN CHARGES:

Park Gutted to Give Mining Firm Its Way



KIERNAN
. . . 'malarkey'

The blame for opening Strathcona Park to mining interests was laid squarely on the shoulders of Recreation Minister Kiernan on Thursday.

The minister was accused by Opposition Leader Strachan of using his present job to help the people he associated with in his former post of mines minister.

Mr. Strachan said 162 claims were staked at the southwestern end of Buttle Lake between 1959 and 1963 when Mr. Kiernan was mines minister.

He said these claims — consolidated with 23 granted in 1924 and held by Western Mines Ltd. — were enough to guarantee that development of a mine at Myra Creek would be profitable.

The Opposition leader said Mr. Kiernan was made recreation minister in 1964 and on May 13, 1965, the cabinet approved his recommendation that the Class A park be broken into three conservancy areas and two Class B areas.

This move put Western Mines holdings in a Class B area where mining is permitted.

On the same day the order-in-council was issued "a park use permit was given to the company — they could hardly wait to get their hot little hands on it."

Said Mr. Strachan: "Every action of the minister since his appointment (in 1964) has been directed towards giving the people with whom we dealt with as minister of mines everything they need to utilize the property he gave them as minister of mines.

"The whole purpose of creating Class B sections in the park was to allow the minister . . . step by step . . . to give this company (Western Mines) the right to do anything they please in this park.

"And that's why the park was gutted we think there's some-

Mr. Strachan suggested the government is willing to leave no stone unturned to help some company make money.

"They believe the parks are secondary.

"But we think there's something more than the almighty dollar bill."

Referring to the staking of claims in the park, Mr. Strachan said: "Step by step, the people of B.C. and members of this House have been led down the garden path."

Mr. Strachan pointed out that an order-in-council had been passed in 1962 bringing large areas of B.C. under control of the Pollution Control Board.

But, he said, another act was passed later leaving Buttle Lake outside control of the board.

"The policy of this minister blows nothing but ill for the future of parks in this province."

Mr. Kiernan replied that he had never heard "such nonsense, misinformation, misrepresentation and distortion of the facts."

He said a new parks act was passed last year to clear up "40 years of contradiction, procrastination and lack of direction" in park management.

Certain parks, he said, were termed Class A where there was not supposed to be industrial development, but "this was the greatest bunch of malarkey ever foisted on an unsuspecting public."

He said the new act allows him to "weed out" from the original Class A areas parts where land had already been alienated.

"We are trying to straighten up this situation to make every classification mean what it says," Mr. Kiernan said.

Strathcona was one park in that situation because there had been 1924 Crown grants for mining claims.

Surprise support came for Mr. Kiernan from Gordon Gibson (L—North Vancouver).

Mr. Gibson told the recreation minister: "I want you to give the people all the co-operation you can in developing Western Mines and any other mines.

". . . You have my complete support."

KIERNAN:

Lagoon Price Tag Too High

The provincial government would like to bring Witty's Lagoon into the regional parks fold but the price of the property is too steep, says Recreation Minister Ken Kiernan.

Mr. Kiernan told the legislature Thursday night that negotiations between the government and the Witty family had broken down and there is little possibility of a settlement.

Questioned later, he said the Witty family had originally asked $300,000 for their seashore property but had agreed to drop the asking price to $250,000 after negitiations started.

$160,000 APPRAISAL

"We had the property appraised and the value was set at $160,000," Mr. Kiernan said. "We were prepared to go as high as $175,000 but not higher. All the talks were held in the friendliest of circumstances."

Mr. Kiernan said he still had hopes negotiations could be resumed some time in the future and that an agreement could be reached. But he admitted a private offer meeting the Witty asking price could see the possible park lost forever.

SIDNEY LIBRARY TO OPEN APRIL 2

Sidney's new library will be open to residents on the north end of the Saanich peninsula on April 2.

It will be temporarily located in the Gordon Hulme building on Beacon Avenue.

Hours will be 2 p.m. to 5 p.m., Monday to Friday. It will also be open Friday evening from 7 to 8, and on Saturday between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Custodian Susan Thuiller said the library service is available to all residents of North Saanich and Sidney, but non-residents may also use it by paying a fee of $6.

The bookmobile will continue serving North Saanich residents.

MODEL WATERWHEEL FOR CENTENARY

CHEMAINUS — North Cowichan centennial committee Thursday agreed to support the building of a model waterwheel at Chemainus as a centennial project.

The committee pledged financial support to the Mount Prevost Chapter of Native Sons and Chemainus Natural History Society which have undertaken the work.

Action Stations! Saves Activity Room

When measurements confirmed Mr. Bailey's fears the road widening was stopped.

Mr. Bailey said Thursday the road work is being held up until the education and highway departments consider the feasibility of transferring the road widening from the north side to the south.

'North End Only' Ballot Sought on Arena at Lake

By DON DINGWALL

NORTH COWICAN — Chemainus and Crofton ratepayers are expected to raise a petition calling on municipal council to submit a revised recreation bylaw to the north end.

Directors of both ratepayer associations meet jointly tonight to discuss the proposal.

Coun. Gerry Smith told North Cowichan Recreation Commission Thursday he understood the ratepayers wanted a north end vote on a bylaw to build a $300,000 ice arena at Fullers Lake.

A composite $700,000 bylaw for the whole municipality was defeated Saturday.

Mr. Smith asked commission support for the ratepayers.

Jack L. Gallagher said it would be wrong of the commission to pre-suppose what the ratepayer associations want.

'SEND REQUEST'

"They should send in a request to the commission."

Coun. Dennis Hogan, chairman, said: "We don't want to go off at a tangent and indicate a feud is developing between north and south.

"This commission will not stand in the way of any recreational development, but let's not be hasty."

TWO COMMITTEES

He steered the meeting to set up two sub-committees.

Mr. Hogan will chair one subcommittee to consult with Duncan and South Cowichan recreation commissions.

Mr. Smith will head a subcommittee to discuss future plans with north end interests.

Al. Dines, Chemainus, said the commission should support re-submission of the bylaw.

Baden Millard, Chemainus, made the same plea.

CAREFUL STUDY

Mr. Hogan said any joint participation in future will require careful study.

There is no strong opinion in the north of the municipality for either a swimming pool or community centre. The chief cry is for an ice arena.

There are three distinct groups in the south end, he said, one for an ice arena, one for a pool, and the third for a fine arts auditorium.

"We really don't know what the people in the south end want."

In a reference to the defeated bylaw and Fullers Lake arena, he said:

"The north end people knew exactly what they were voting for, and what it looked like."

MORE EXPLICIT

If the bylaw was put again it must be more explicit about facilities near Duncan.

"A composite bylaw may never be the answer in North Cowichan."

Mr. Dines said: "As a representative of the north I say we're not prepared to give up Fullers Lake arena. It may be we should break into two groups within the commission."

Attack Sparks Uproar

Strachan Remark Held Disgraceful

By JOHN MIKA
Legislative Reporter

The legislature exploded like a pressure cooker Thursday night after five hours of increasingly heated debate over the Western Mines development in Strathcona Park.

The argument boiled over into a flood of bitter shouting with Premier Bennett, Opposition Leader Robert Strachan and Liberal Leader Ray Perrault while the rest of the MLAs hooted and catcalled.

For a few moments the House was out of control but the immediate target of the fury — Pat McGeer (L—Vancouver-Point Grey) — was absent.

DEADLY THRUST

The uproar began as Liberals joined Socreds to decry Mr. Strachan's contention that up to 250 pounds of poisonous copper sulphate would go into Buttle Lake from the mining operation each day, posing a deadly threat to the game fish.

Mr. McGeer, pointing out he was a research chemist who had investigated the situation, accused Mr. Strachan of "misleading the House" because all the copper sulphate would be consumed by the mining process and could not enter the lake.

A few minutes later, after Mr. McGeer had left the chamber, Mr. Strachan rose again to attack the Liberals and Socreds for combining to try "to cover up a plan to destroy a public park" by private development.

'NOT DISINTERESTED'

"I was surprised that (McGeer) participated in this debate because according to the records of the companies office, he is not a disinterested party," Mr. Strachan said.

Premier Bennett and Mr. Perrault immediately erupted and all three shouted at each other.

"It was a personal attack on a member of the House," called Mr. Bennett.

WITHDRAWAL ASKED

Attorney-General Robert Bonner demanded a withdrawal of the imputation while Mr McGeer was absent and committee chairman William Speare ordered Mr. Strachan to make a retraction.

But Mr. Strachan began arguing with Mr. Speare and the premier jumped back into the fight:

"As leader of the government and this House I must accept responsibility for the individual integrity of all the members of this House.

"The member for Point Grey has been attacked by the leader of the Opposition in a dastardly way and he was not here to defend himself.

"As leader of the government I do not want this house to be brought down to the same state as Ottawa which the leader of the Opposition has been trying to do at this session."

Mr. Strachan stormed back that the premier was trying to create a scene to divert attention from Strathcona Park's fate.

CREATING CHAOS

"The premier is deliberately trying to create chaos in this house so that public attention will be directed toward the chaos instead of the bankrupt park policies of this government," he said.

"He is trying to create a

Death-Defying Expedition Completes Vertical Assault

The new milestone in the history of Alpine climbing was accomplished by four West Germans and a Briton, all that was left of a 13-man, three-country group which set out on the wall 30 days ago. Two completed the climb late Thursday.

The final leg of the ascent to the 13,036-foot summit over a treacherous ice field was carried out despite howling winds and temperatures down to 40 below zero.

There had been fear for the safety of the climbers after 16 hours elapsed without contact. But the clouds parted for a time and they could be seen by telescope as they neared completion of their climb.

Then a jubilant radio message from the mist-shrouded peak announced tersely at dusk that the expedition was crowned with success.

West Germans Joerg Lehne, 29, and Guenther Strobel, 24, were the first to reach the summit.

UNDAUNTED B YGALES

Neither gales lashing the Alps nor the death of American teammate John Harlin three days ago stopped the Alpinists.

Elger has been scaled many times before but never over the vertificial-ascent route.

New War Intolerable, Erhard Tells World

BONN (Reuters) — Chancellor Ludwig Erhard today appealed to all non-nuclear powers to follow West Germany's example and formally renounce production of nuclear weapons.

Erhard, presenting a seven-point "peace program" to Parliament, also called on the present atomic powers to reach agreement on the non-proliferation of nuclear weapons.

Erhard said West Germany is prepared to exchange "declarations of renunciation of the use of violence" with Russia, Czechoslovakia and any other European states.

Erhard said his country wants no new war and is doing all in its power to avoid it.

"The thought of a new war is intolerable in the German nation."

Erhard said German reunification is to be achieved only by peaceful means.

He made these other points:

—The federal government wants worldwide, general and controlled disarmament.

—The most difficult problems among peoples can be peacefully and justly solved.

—West Germany has settled its problems in the West, and would like to settle with its Eastern neighbors, too.

He said he would like a more friendly relationship with Czechoslovakia and that West Germany has no territorial claims on it.

Viet Eyes Election This Year

SAIGON (Reuters) — Prime Minister Nguyen Cao Ky tonight announced plans to speed the country's move from military rule to constitutional government.

Observers here regard the announcement as a major concession to the country's Buddhists whose anti-government demonstrations have sporadically paralysed life in northern cities during the last two weeks.

The 36-year-old prime minister said a council would be appointed within a week to draft a constitution. The constitution should be ready in two months.

He said a national referendum would be held on the proposed constitution and would be followed as soon as possible by general elections.

Informed government sources said tonight the nine generals ruling the country were thinking in terms of elections before the end of this year if the plan went according to the timetable.

The prime minister's announcement came as anti-government agitation moved south from the northern cities of Hue and Da Nang to the coastal city of Nha Trang, 200 miles northeast of Saigon.

Today's demonstration in Nha Trang was the first reported outside the northern area formerly under the control of Lt.-Gen. Nguyen Chanh Thi, whose removal from the ruling junta two weeks ago sparked the unrest.

HUE, DA NANG QUIET

Hue and Da Nang today were reported quiet for the first time since the unrest erupted March 10 into general strikes, student-led demonstrations, school boycotts and anti-government and anti-American speeches over the local radio stations.

But in announcing the new moves towards civilian rule tonight Ky hinted at a clampdown on agitators who so far have been given a free rein by police.

Ky warned that the situation in the northern cities "cannot be allowed to continue." He added: "We must solve the problem . . . by all means."

Nguyen Huu Giao, president of the student wing of a Buddhist political action group called "People's Struggle for the Revolution," today gave Ky until Sunday to answer Buddhist demands for a popularly-elected civilian government.

Giao said "there may be violence" if the government tries to block student demonstrations and warned, "there are plans for any move Ky may make. The students are well prepered."

Quick Bomb Pact Hunted

WASHINGTON (AP) — State Secretary Dean Rusk said today he hopes the United States, Britain and Russia can move promptly toward a treaty banning the spread of nuclear weapons. He suggested France and Communist China might join such a pact.

He said he thinks all the nuclear powers agree that proliferation of nuclear weapons is "dangerous and undesirable."

LONDON (Reuters) — An anonymous telephone warning to Scotland Yard that someone planned to shoot Prime Minister Wilson prompted tighter security precautions around the campaigning Labor party leader today.

Detectives Thursday night guarded a hall in Dunstable in Bedfordshire while Wilson spoke amid constant interruption from hecklers, who were also active at a London meeting addressed by Conservative Leader Edward Heath.

Meanwhile, the latest opinion polls showed that the landslide victory confidently predicted for the Labor party may be whittled down somewhat by election day next Thursday.

One poll, published by the Daily Express, shows a slight swing toward the Conservatives although still giving labor a hefty lead of 13½ per cent.

The latest national opinion poll shows a slight drop in Labor's lead to 12.2 per cent from 13, and a Gallup poll survey shows Labor's margin had been trimmed to 8.5 per cent from 12.

Lowest in Years Forecasts Sharp

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada's good times have turned into a full-fledged boom with further expansion and higher prices still to come, Finance Minister Sharp reported today.

For the fiscal year ending March 31 he predicted a sharp cut in the federal government's budgetary deficit to $34,000,000—lowest in nine years. It was $38,000,000 in 1964-65 and as high as $791,000,000 in 1961-62.

In his budget speech a year ago Walter Gordon, Mr. Sharp's predecessor, had forecast a $300,000,000 deficit for the current year.

Mr. Sharp tabled in the Commons a background paper for his Tuesday night budget which also said:

—The current upswing in the business cycle, which began in the spring of 1961, is showing signs of maturity. But there are still strong pressures moving the economy ahead.

—The $34,000,000 deficit, resulting from 1965-66 revenues of $7,673,000,000 and expenditures of $7,707,000,000, brings the net debt to $15,538,000,000 or $782 per capita compared with $794 a year ago.

—Wage rates advanced more rapidly than in 1964 but productivity gains were slower, meaning higher labor costs per unit of output.

—Expansion and growth now have become more dependent on improved productivity, avoidance of bottlenecks and upgrading the quality of both labor and capital plant and equipment.

The review gave no final tabulation of gross national product—total value of all goods and services produced by the country—but said it is expected to be nine per cent higher than 1964's $47,003,000,000.

The white paper gave no hint as to what line of tax and spending policy Mr. Sharp may take in his budget. Its projections were based on existing tax rates.

"The economic climate changed during 1965 from one of moderate expansion in the early part of the year to one of boom at present," it said. "This change was brought about by the rapidly rising level of public and private investment superimposed on rising demands by consumers, governments and from exports."

There now was little if any slack in the economy and further expansion would depend on improved use of the country's capacity as well as its steady growth. In addition to the big increase in capital investment forecast for 1966, there would be continued increases in spending by all levels of government and business and consumers.

"The productive facilities of the Canadian economy now are close to their maximum rate of utilization, and the present and anticipated rate of expansion in demand appears likely to strain the resources currently available to meet it."

As to prices, the report said: " . . . Current upward price trends could well persist, unless significant productivity improvements emerge to add to the supply capability of the economy or unless the rate of increase in demand should turn out to be notably lower than currently expected."

It added that conditions early in 1966 suggest "it would not be prudent to assume a rate of price increase any less than that recorded in 1965." At the end of 1965, the consumer price

Estimated budgetary deficit of $34,000,000 in 1965-66 fiscal year, down sharply from $300,000,000 forecast last April and lowest deficit in nine years.

Booming economy expected to continue in high gear this year.

Gross national product—total value of all goods and services produced—estimated nine per cent higher in 1965.

Further drop in unemployment predicted for 1966; high labor demand to be partly met by more married women and retired persons taking part-time work.

Revenues $7,673,000,000 and expenditures $7,707,000,000, both up seven per cent from 1964-65.

Surplus of $240,000,000 in old age pension operations, cut to $215,000,000 after paying off temporary treasury loan.

Net national debt up $34,000,000 in year at $15,538,400,000; per capita debt down $12 at $782.

Tip Saves 2 Drivers In Truck Hijacking

THESSALON, Ont. (CP) — The lives of two truck drivers may have been saved early today when hijackers who had kidnapped them tipped off police to their whereabouts.

The two, Kris Miske, 42, of Vancouver, and David Lukiv, 39, of Coquitlam were found shivering and shackled to a bannister in a deserted dance hall on Highway 17 near here. Thesstlon is 50 miles east of Sault Ste. Marie.

They had been left there handcuffed to the bannister for two days after three gunmen hijacked their tractor-trailer loaded with $180,000 in cigarettes. There was no trace of the transport, owned by D. S. Scott Transport Ltd. of Vancouver.

DEBATE MAY EXTEND BEYOND MONDAY

Close Vote Certain on Death Penalty

By MICHAEL GILLAN

OTTAWA (CP) Two full days of Commons debate indicate that any vote on abolishing the death penalty will be won or lost by a hair.

In 27 speeches by MPs up to Thursday night, 13 are in favor of outright abolition, 12 want it retained for most offences now covered and two can be classified as undecided—at least until a vote is held.

The government has set aside three days for debating the issue, and with more than 80 members initially intending to speak there is no certainty there will be a vote Monday, the final scheduled day for the debate.

Today has been set aside for an interim money supply bill and some minor government measures.

Many strongly-worded speeches have been delivered against the resolution to scrap capital punishment but nobody has moved amendments so far.

The government is expected to postpone any decision about extending the debate until Monday shows whether a vote on the resolution will be taken. Any resolution would be followed by a bill to make any changes law.

FREE VOTE PLEDGED

Prime Minister Pearson several months ago pledged a free vote on the issue, enabling a debate without party positions being taken.

The resolution, which substitutes a mandatory life sentence for hanging, was sponsored by four MPs in three parties. It would require the federal cabinet to approve any parole for a lifer.

At present planned and deliberate murders—capital murders—are punishable by death. But the Pearson government has commuted to life imprisonment 20 of these sentences since taking office in 1963. The Diefenbaker government had commuted three in a row before leaving office.

Non-capital murder, defined as all murders not planned and deliberate, is punishable by life imprisonment.

Abolitionist MPs tend to argue that the death penalty is not a deterrent, that hanging is a calculated killing repugnant to a supposedly-civilized society and that there is always the danger an innocent man will be executed.

Retentionists said it is uncertain whether the noose acts as a deterrent to potential mur-

MARKET SUMMARIES

Toronto, N.Y. Gaining

Airlines and other industrials made wide gains at New York and Toronto today although weekend profit-taking was expected to nip at the early jumps.

AT VANCOUVER Bethex touched a 1966 high in the mining section rising .07 to .67.

Giant Mascot gained .12 to $1.25 and Copper Ridge put on .06 to .47.

Lornex dropped .10 to $6.25 and Western Mines lost the same amount to $5.50.

AT NEW YORK volume for the day was estimated at 7,600,000 shares compared with 7,880,000 Thursday.

Polaroid rose 9, IBM 7, Zenith, Northwest Airlines and Texas Instruments about 5 each, Fairchild Camera nearly 6.

Up about 3 were Xerox, Admiral and Burroughs. Ahead 2 or better were Magnavox, Combustion Engineering and National Airlines.

Boeing, McDonnell Aircraft, Raytheon, American Airlines and Pan American World Airways rose a point or so.

In the main list, John Labatt Ltd. climbed 1 to 17⅝ following an announcement the Jos. Schlitz Brewing Co. of Milwaukee had to divest its control of the Labatt Company.

AT MONTREAL utilities and banks were off but most other sections moved fractionally higher in moderately active trading.

Industrial volume was 184,000 and mines and oils 360,500.

For a start, let us take the venerable Duck's Building by its four corners and carefully transfer it from View Street where I plunked it in a moment of madness, its proper site at 1318 Broad.

That done, I suggest we now stock up with some cold fried chicken, to be washed down with beer, vin rose or soda pop as you prefer, and take ourselves off to some grassy spot where the sun strikes warm and spring has scattered her blossoms.

If I had my druthers, which happens just often enough to keep me from bitterness, we would, in fact, junk our present calendar and add an extra day to each week.

"Slothday," we'd name it, and I think it would fit nicely between bustling Wednesday and scurrying Thursday.

It would be for loafing and dreaming and the lazy kind of thinking to which earth owes many of its more significant advances.

History may have a different version, but you can take it from me that Gilileo didn't do his star-gazing with his nose in a book.

His most profound discoveries, I'm convinced, were made through the leaves of some midnight tree, probably with a pretty head nestled on his shoulder.

The same for other great men. The best they produced came to them when they declared a Slothday and got hit by a falling apple (Newton) or were drowsing in a warm bath (Archimedes) or fooling around with a key on a kite-string (Ben Franklin).

They don't . . . they can't . . . let their thoughts go walkabout in the limbo where lurk ideas that dart away like trout in a shallow from the purposeful approach.

The fellow who first conceived the notion of hinging a knife-blade to a handle so it would slip into his pocket was undoubtedly a whittler who liked to sit in the sun and peel off idle shavings when the mood took him.

The typewriter was the brain-child of a man who rebelled against the clerkish slavery of the copper-plate hand, guided just so over the paper with shoulders hunched and tongue between teeth.

Undoubtedly, one day when the grass was green and the birds were giving praise for lovely life, he tossed his pen over his shoulder and took off.

He mooched home at evenfall with grass stains on his pants, and in his head the pilot model of a machine which would render penmanship obsolete.

Well, I can't toss this clattering beast of a typewriter over my shoulder, but about five minutes from now I mean to declare myself a spring dividend in the form of a Slothday.

Probably nothing will come of it except a contented mind. Still, you never know what shy deer will step out of the woods if, instead of bustling around in circles, a man settles himself comfortably, slips his brain into neutral and lets life's hurly-burly fade from sight and sound.

Once after half a year of hard and fruitless writing, I declared a Slothday and took myself off to a wild beach where I did nothing more constructive than steam clams and help the tide come in.

My fire had a stick of island juniper in it, and from that unmatchable incense, a story evolved.

I called it "Scent of Juniper." An editor renamed it "To Walk in Honor," and under that title it fetched a price that sent the wolf scampering from our door.

Slothday, of course, isn't for everybody. There are those, and I pity them, who must churn their busy motors till the main bearing burns out.

But not me! I'm off to consider the lilies of the field, or the daffodils and the flowering plum at least, and I won't be back till Slothday's over.

Woman Fined $25

Mrs. Sonria Humphry, trading as Hart House, 1961 Fairfield, was fined $25 in central court Thursday for failing to make records available to the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

She pleaded guilty.

'Other Universities Will Envy Us'

The National Research Council has given 20 per cent of its 1966 awards for graduate study to students at the University of Victoria.

The high percentage means that one out of every seven B.Sc. graduates at Uvic this year will receive an NRC bursary.

Dr. Malcolm Taylor, university president, was delighted this morning.

"Other universities will envy us," he said.

Dr. Taylor said the large number of awards shows that Uvic ranks high in the quality of its undergraduate teaching

TUESDAY LUNCHEON

Dr. Taylor said the university will honor the winners of the NRC bursaries, and of four recently announced Woodrow Wilson Fellowships, at a luncheon next Tuesday in the Oak Bay Beach Hotel.

Twelve students at University of Victoria were given the $2,500 awards for advanced study. The purpose of the awards is to encourage science students to undertake graduate study

Another aim is to stop the so-called brain drain which every year sees bright Canadians go abroad for further study and work. NRC bursaries are for study at Canadian universities.

Outstanding among the NRC winners is Anthony Patriarche who only two weeks ago was awarded a Woodrow Wilson Fellowship. Mr. Patriarche, of 1377 Rockland, intends to do graduate work in medical biophysics at the University of Toronto.

Two other NRC winners only narrowly missed being given Woodrow Wilson Fellowships but were awarded honorable mentions. An honorable mention is considered a high academic honor in this field.

They are Roger Barnsley, 1400 Vancouver, and Christian Fibiger, 816 Blanshard. They are both psychology students. Mr. Barnsley intends to do graduate work at McGill and Mr. Fibiger is undecided as yet about his graduate study.

The other NRC winners and where they intend to study are as follows: Miss Sharon-Dale Brown, 117 Kingham Place, botany at University of Saskatchewan; S. D. Bulman-Fleming, 2630 Dalhousie, maths at Queen's University; A. J. Cleland, 3150 Midland Road, chemistry at McMaster.

J. C. Davis, 2637 Estevan, zoology at UBC; Miss Anthea Fisk, 907 Oliver, biology at UBC; J. A. J. Matthews, 2895 Ashley, theoretical physics at Toronto; A. R. W. McKellar, 3763 Cadboro Bay Road, physics at Toronto; R. W. McMillin, 1572 Athlone, maths at Queen's, and Rolf Turner of Fort Nelson, maths at Queen's.

The dinner to honor the award-winning students next week will be attended by Lieutenant-Governor George Pearkes and Judge J. B. Clearihue, chancellor of the university.

Mayor Suspects 'Horse-Trading' In Parks Budget

Veteran estimates-defender Herbert Warren, Victoria parks administrator, ran into heavy going this morning as a five-man city council committee reviewed his 1966 budget requests.

Mr. Warren was faring well until the committee came to his first major expenditure proposal — a new crew headquarters for men working in Beacon Hill Park.

He asked $18,500 for the new building.

"If this item is approved we can remove the old and unsightly wooden sheds we are now using in the centre of the park and replace them with a modern building," he said.

UNMOVED

The plea was eloquent but the committee, which up to that point had trimmed only a few thousand dollars from the budget, appeared unmoved.

It ordered the $18,500 chopped.

The same fate awaited a latter application for $12,000 to build new public toilet facilities in Victoria West Park.

But Mr. Warren didn't lose them all.

His bid for $19,500 to build new headquarters for small park crews at Topaz Park won grudging committee approval.

"The small parks crews have been without a home since the fire at Royal Athletic Park destroyed their old headquarters," Mr. Warren told the committee.

'HORSE-TRADING'

"It sounds like a little horse-rading to me," said Mayor A. W. Toone remembering Mr. Warren's calm acceptance of the Beacon Hill cut.

Once in slashing mood the committee made up for its earlier generosity.

A request for $1,000 for the installation of playground equipment at Highview playground was cut with little discussion.

So were requests for $3,600 for an underground sprinkling system in Centennial Square, $2,600 for a motorcycle with box for carrying equipment, $950 for a new power mower, and $1,300 for new tools and equipment for the maintenance yard.

"How do we water Centennial Square now?" asked Ald. Hugh Stephen.

"With hoses and sprinklers," answered Mr. Warren.

"I think we can carry on that way for a little while," said Ald. Stephen and a unanimous committee agreed.

Among the major expenditures approved by the committee was $18,000 to renew the old greenhouse at the city's nursery stock headquarters.

NEEDED

"It sounds like a lot of money," said Ald. Stephen. "But I have visited the greenhouses and I'm convinced the expenditure is needed and justified. After all the greenhouse is the heart of our entire parks system."

The total amount requested by the parks department to maintain the city's recreational areas is $572,623 an increase of $21,204 over last year.

In addition the department is requesting $189,045 for new development, equipment and buildings. Last year the department spent $44,432 on extraordinary projects.

Under a third section of the parks budget Mr. Warren is asking for approval of $118,065 to spend on other community services. The amount is $23,975 higher than last year.

Listed under "other services" are Ross Bay cemetery, playground supervision, the senior citizens centre and regional park levies.

Retired Foreman At Newspaper Succumbs at 83

A former foreman of the Victoria Colonist composing room, Alfred Charles Chislett, died Thursday. He was 83.

A native son of Victoria, he is survived by the widow, Agnes, and a daughter, Mrs. Rudolph (Eileen) Kullman, at the family home, 2510 Prior, and a sister, Mrs. Ethel Dunn of Victoria.

He was a member of Britannia Lodge No. 73, AF and AM, BCR, and also AOF court of Northern Light, Canadian Order of Foresters, Mizpah No. 2, Order of the Amaranth, and the International Typographical Union.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later by Sands Mortuary.

CENTENNIAL BLUES

B.C. Misses On U.S. Hits Say Singers

A long-play record being distributed by the B.C. Centennial Committee has revived the charge of American influence in provincial celebrations.

Entitled Beautiful British Columbia it is composed of favorite U.S. tunes sung by top U.S. recording artists.

"Whoever thought of this should have his head examined," said Victoria singer Pierre Timp today.

'BAD JUDGMENT'

"I think it is bad judgment. We have lots of good talent in Canada. This should have been a Canadian effort. Why borrow from American artists?"

Mr. Timp, well known in city entertainment circles, is to be featured performer in the Norma Macdonald Memorial Show at McPherson Playhouse Monday.

Another well-known local singer Jock Dunbar said, "I think it's a darn disgrace." He said he wouldn't complain at the U.S. artists if the songs at least had something to do with B.C.

'SIGNIFICANT'

(An accompanying government press release said the 12 selections are "significant of the many moods" of B.C.)

Mr. Dunbar said this is worse than the suggestion some weeks ago that American producers he engaged to stage the Victoria celebrations.

He pointed out that a recording he had just completed, "Follow the Birds to Victoria" is being taken to California with a tourist booster crusade by B.C. Ferry assistant manager Ron Worley.

B.C. PHOTOS

Selections include September Song, Long Ago and Far Away, Downtown (a British production), Lucky Old Sun, Cool Water and Cherry Pink and Apple Blossom White, among others.

CLAIM FILED NEXT WEEK

Missing Witness Sued

The famous missing witness in the noisy, six-week highway graft probe that rocked the legislature three years ago is being sued by the man who started it all.

A Vancouver lawyer today said a statement of claim for damages alleging fraudulent misrepresentation will be filed next week against Burton Lymburner who never testified at the hearings despite an attempt to find him.

Dick Holzworth, a Helena, Mont., contractor who made allegations against Highways Minister P. A. Gaglardi that touched off the inquiry, Thursday night told the Times he found Mr. Lymburner in a Vancouver hotel and served him with the court writ.

The writ was issued two weeks ago by Chief Justice J. O. Wilson of B.C. Supreme Court and L. St. M. Du Molin, QC, Vancouver lawyer for Mr. Lymburner, has entered an appearance, putting the civic suit into motion.

A trial is not expected until December or January due to the preliminaries required and the busy Vancouver court schedule, Frank Harrop, counsel for Mr. Holsworth said.

The writ summarizes Mr. Holzworth's claim as a suit for an unstated amount as damages "for fraudulent misrepresentation and deceit arising from the sale of shares in L&M Logging Co. Ltd. to the plaintiff by the defendant with respect to Project 819 highway contract in or about March, 1958."

GAGLARDI CLEARED

Project 819—a stretch of the Trans-Canada Highway—was the central object of the 1963 legislative committee inquiry which cost $40,000 and cleared Mr. Gaglardi of any wrongdoing.

Mr. Holzworth at the time told MLAs he lost almost $200,000 when he took over the project from Mr. Lymburner's L & M firm, as a result of earlier irregularities on the contract.

Mr. Lymburner was sought by the committee as a witness in Canada and the United States but was not located and never appeared.

Mr. Harrop is a member of Mr. Dowding's legal firm.

MERGER VOTE SATURDAY

D for decision.

All property owners in the southern extension of the provincial territory may vote on the proposal to incorporate the area with Esquimalt.

Poll will be open at Craigflower Auto Court, 101 Island Highway, 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Young Naturalists Going to Bear Hill

The younger section of the junior branch of the Victoria Natural History Society will meet on Saturday at 1:30 p.m. at Douglas and Hillside for a field trip to Bear Hill, off Brookleigh Road.

The leader section will leave at 9:30 a.m. on Sunday for an expedition to Iron Mine Bay, East Sooke.

Examination Asked Before Pets Killed

Mandatory veterinary examination and advertising should be required in each instance before animals are destroyed by the SPCA, a legislative committee was told Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. James Barr, 965 Trans-Canada Highway, made the submission to the committee on behalf of the Cats Protection League.

They recounted one incident in which a one-eyed pet cat became lost from a temporary home while its owners were on vacation. It was picked up and destroyed by the SPCA.

Harry McKay (L—Fernie) said the requirement of a veterinarian's certificate and wide advertising would be impractical and exhoritantly expensive for a voluntary society.

David Beeching, Victoria SPCA manager, said $1,000 was spent for veterinary services and $300 for advertising last year.

He said he would be willing to meet the mandatory suggestion "if someone would donate the extra money needed for this."

Mr. Beeching added a peace officer and an SPCA official must concur before any animal is destroyed.

And advertising is used to try to locate an owner wherever possible, he said.

Ask The Times

Q. Is anyone over 70 or 80 years old allowed $1,500 without income tax?

X. Y. Z.

A. Yes, says the local income tax division of the revenue department.

Anyone born before 1900 is permitted $1,500 in earnings tax-free as well as the standard $100 deduction.

Q. Would the water level at the Gorge Bridge be the same as at the breakwater or Lagoon area at slack tide?

F. A. P.

A. Pretty well the same, says the hydrographic division, department of mines.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the problem along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

ALL THAT MESSY PAINTING HAS A POINT

KINDERGARTENS ARE BOOMING

'First and Last Chance to Foster Creativity'

By DESMOND BILL
Times Education Reporter

Shakespeare thought school was a place to which children went "creeping like snails, unwillingly."

Shakespeare evidently didn't know about kindergartens.

But then, even some parents of children who attend kindergartens don't know much about them.

Ask Mrs. Lynn Mills. She is a teacher at Lansdowne Co-operative.

She says some parents think kindergarten is a sort of glorified baby-sitting service. Others confuse it with school and can't understand why their children don't learn to read and write at it.

FASTEST GROWING

Actually, kindergartens are probably the fastest growing development in modern education.

Soon, a child will be underprivileged if he or she does not attend pre-school classes.

Already, children who do attend kindergarten have a better chance all through school years than those who don't receive some pre-school training.

Mrs. Mills is typical of the new breed of kindergarten teacher. It used to be the sort of job that went to dear old ladies who were supposed to have "a wonderful way with children."

But teachers such as Mrs. Mills study psychology and personality development, creative use of graphics and teaching methods in order to earn the certificate of a pre-school teacher.

She feels strongly about her work. "This is the first and last chance to foster creativity in children. Do you know why hardly any adults nowadays can paint? Because the creative ability was killed in them when they were children."

Drawing out and refining a child's creative instincts is the kindergarten approach. It is the point behind the messy painting and the generally relaxed atmosphere.

Says Mrs. Mills, "Children learn by feeling, seeing, tasting. It is a shock for them to be suddenly forced in school to learn in an abstract, verbal way. But through kindergarten they are gradually introduced to the learning process that they will encounter in school."

NOTHING FORCED

Mrs. Mills says the key to the kindergarten's success is that "nothing is forced. It is a fact that children develop at different speeds. They regress occasionally. We let them set their own pace."

She says she finds many parents anxious that their children be taught as soon as possible to read and write. "They never realize that forcing youngsters to learn to read too soon is the surest way to make them hate reading.

"A study not long ago showed that 75 per cent of the high school students who have reading problems are suffering from the effects of formal reading too early in life."

The emphasis on making education fit the child and not forcing the child to fit the educational format, results in youngsters who enjoy developing their own ability and intelligence.

Says Mrs. Mills: "The children in our kindergartens enjoy going to them. And they are learning there. When they go to school they have a receptive attitude to the educational experience there."

Parents Can Question The Experts at Workshop

Parents interested in the pre-school education of their youngsters will have the opportunity to attend a workshop Saturday, April 2, by the Vancouver Island Playgroup Association.

The workshop will give practical guidance and there will be opportunity for parents to question the experts.

The morning sessions will feature Mrs. Miriam Thomas talking about the Montessori Method of teaching young children. Also in the morning there will be a talk by Miss Ulha Jacobsen, kindergarten supervisor for the Greater Victoria School Board, on "What is happening in the public schools and why."

The afternoon session will feature a talk by Mrs. Roberta Emery on recent research and development in pre-school education. Mrs. Emery is co-ordinator of pre-school extension courses at University of Victoria.

The other afternoon speaker will be Miss Jean Day who will talk of the transition from pre-school to primary education. Miss Day is on the faculty of education at Uvic.

The workshop will be held from 9:30 to 3 at Stevenson Memorial Hall, 1792 Townley. Registration fee is $1.50 but persons may attend for part of the sessions.

Parents intending to go should register in advance by contacting Mrs. E. Cummins, 1288 Roy Road, at GR 9-2820.

Farmhands Bid For Old Spots With Big Club

By The Canadian Press

A couple of Boston Bruins' farmhands are bidding for another chance to play in the National Hockey League.

STAN MIKITA
. . . 28th goal

Then, when Ed Westfall suffered a broken toe against New York Rangers last Sunday night, the Bruins put in another call to Hershey—this time for Wayne Rivers.

Both Leiter and Rivers, who played with the Bruins last year, proved they could handle an NHL assignment Thursday night as Boston limited Bobby Hull to one assist in a 3-1 victory over Chicago Black Hawks.

Rookies Score

Leiter's goal Thursday night was his second of the season, while Rivers, playing in his initial game of the season, netted his first. The other Boston marksman was John McKenzie, who scored his 17th of the campaign.

Stan Mikita scored his 28th to account for Chicago's lone goal.

The Bruins also got some spectacular netminding from Ed Johnson, who replaced Bernie Parent in the second period.

Parent twisted his ankle making a save on Hull, who moved a step nearer to the NHL season scoring record with his assist, giving him a total of 94 points so far this year.

Hull has four games left this season to pick up three points to break the record of 96 points in a season, set in 1958-59 by Dickie Moore, former Montreal star.

Play was rough during the game and Mikita was injured in the second period when he was sent into the boards by Don Awrey.

He's in Stitches

The clubs battled to a scoreless stalemate until 16:01 of the final period when Keon combined with Tim Horton and Larry Hillman for his 23rd season goal—a counter that was hotly disputed by the Montrealers who claimed the Leaf centre had been offside on the play.

Mahovlich's 31st season goal came with only 59 seconds remaining to play and was the result of a breakaway on a pressing Montreal team, which was attempting to match Keon's marker.

Veteran goalie Johnny Bower was the difference in the game, as he blocked 34 shots for his third shutout in 30 games this year.

Major League Or None

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — Plans for a 10 - team North American Soccer League with a 1968 date target were disclosed Thursday by owner Arthur C. Allyn of the Chicago White Sox.

Allyn, who would field a soccer team in White Sox park at Chicago, said the league still was in the talking stage but would be either a big league operation or none at all.

Among cities interested are Los Angeles, St. Louis, New York, Philadelphia, San Francisco, Vancouver and Toronto, Allyn said.

"We plan to import most of our players from Brazil," said Allyn, who added he favored a early-spring through early-summer season while his baseball club is in spring training or on the road.

Others interested in soccer franchises include Jack Kent Cooke, formerly of Toronto; owners of the Los Angeles Lakers of the NBA and the new Los Angeles franchise in the National Hockey League, and Frank McMahon, Western Canadian industrialist from Vancouver.

'Spectacle' Delayed

Tentatively scheduled for April 10, it has been rescheduled for May 29 at Western Speedway.

Minor Boot Clubs To Replay Final

Scottish defeated Optimists 2-0 in overtime but the losers protested on the grounds the referee allowed too much time.

The protest was upheld. The teams play at Reynolds Park Sunday at 12:30 p.m.

YOUNGSTERS SHOW THEIR POISE

Comic Opera Continues, Gloves Were Too Large

TORONTO (CP)—The problem-plagued fight between champion Cassius Clay and George Chuvalo moved a little farther into the realm of comic opera Thursday.

They staged a try-on ceremony and the gloves were too big.

And that wasn't all.

The Ontario athletic commissioner refused to say what rules will be in effect when Clay and the low - ranked Chuvalo step into the ring here next Tuesday night. He's saving that for next Monday.

Promoters, meanwhile, have been reluctant to divulge how many of the 17,500 seats have been sold in Maple Leaf Gardens, site of the scheduled 15-rounder beginning at 10:30 p.m. EST. But the saga of the overweight gloves didn't hurt ticket sales, which are in need of some ballyhoo.

The gloves weighed in at 10 ounces each at the try-on, from which Clay and athletic commissioner Merv McKenzie were absent.

"I have the same size fist as my fighter," Dundee smiled.

McKenzie managed to be out of town on business until later in the day. A past president of the World Boxing Association which does not recognize Clay as champion, McKenzie has refused to sanction the fight as a title affair.

This means that if Chuvalo, a 7-to-1 underdog, happens to pull an upset, he'll be regarded as the champion except in his own home town.

TUNNEY GETS GLOVES

The glove problem arose when promoter Frank Tunney opened the box containing a set of gloves and handed them to both camps.

"They're a nice glove," Dundee said, trying one on. "But they're 10 ounces and they've got to be eight."

Eight ounce gloves have been required in championship bouts for several years and both Clay and Chuvalo look on this as a title fight.

Dundee called for a set of scales to back up his claim the gloves were too big and they proved him right.

The weigh-in ceremony is set for Tuesday at 11:30 a.m. EST and Ungerman said Chuvalo will likely come in at 209 pounds. Dundee estimated Clay's weight will be about 212.

MIXED TOURNAMENT

A mixed seven-a-side field hockey tournament will be played Saturday at Lansdowne Junior High, starting at 1 p.m.

TOMMY LOCKE

Tommy Could Snap Lock on Columbus

A lock isn't of much value without a key, but in the case of Victoria United, Locke seems to be the key in the team's recent surge toward a Pacific Coast Soccer League playoff spot.

United carries the hot hand into Saturday's match at Royal Athletic Park against Vancouver Columbus.

The Victorians have won six of their last seven games to climb from sixth to fourth place. And in the past four games, United has given up only one goal.

United could vault past Columbus into third with a win Saturday.

Victoria's revival started just about the time coach Frank Grealy shifted Tommy Locke from the forward to a halfback's spot.

COLUMBUS PLAYS TWICE

Coincidence?

One neutral observer doesn't think so. Referee George Steele is one who firmly believes the shifted Locke turned the key.

"Locke is strong," said Steele, "and has been playing extremely well from the half line."

Saturday's game is the first of two Columbus has agreed to play this weekend. Columbus plays UBC Thunderbirds on Sunday. UBC trails United by only one point and there's no doubt that the results of Columbus' two games will 'go a long way towards sorting out the playoff picture.

DISTRICT MATCHES

No Wonder Sir Ronald Getting a Little Tired

Canada Wins Scotch Cup For 7th Time in 8 Years

VANCOUVER (CP)—"I'm getting a little tired of presenting this cup to the Canadian team."

With that, Sir Ronald Cumming Thursday night presented the Scotch Cup, emblematic of the world curling championship, to a Canadian rink for the seventh time in the eight-year history of the tournament.

Sir Ronald, of London, chairman of the group sponsoring the championship, had watched Ron Northcott of Calgary dump the Scottish rink of Chuck Hay from Perth 12-5 in a game that was never in doubt.

Northcott regained for Canada the championship won last year by the United States. He went through the four - day championship undefeated, beating the U.S. rink of Dr. Joseph L. Zbacnik of Moorehead, Minn., 13-10 in his only close match to win first place in the tournament's round - robin section.

Earlier Thursday, Northcott defeated Lars Dracke of Sweden 15-6 in a semi-final. The Americans fell 14-7 to Hay.

Northcott, 30, a construction company executive; third George Fink, 26; second Bernie Sparkes, 25, and lead Fred Storey, 21, broke the final game open with a three in the seventh end to make the score 9-3.

Hay had trouble with the heavy ice throughout and scored only two in the fourth, one in the sixth and two in the 11th before giving up in the 12th.

"We got off to a good start and we just kept going," Northcott said afterwards. "We could handle the heavy ice but the Scots couldn't."

Said Hay: "We couldn't get the rocks up to the house. When we could get the weight we couldn't hit the broom."

Hay was in trouble throughout as his front end missed almost routine shots. He said the rink, which lost to Canada 16-8 earlier in the tournament, played its worst game.

PLAYED WITH CARE

At the same time the Canadians played a careful precision match which saw them pick up twos in the second, fifth and 10th ends.

Northcott said his toughest game was the one against the U.S. whose dentist skip plays out of Fargo, N.D. Dr. Zbacnik had freely predicted his rink would retain the championship for the U.S.

FRANCE A FAVORITE

France was entered for the first time—and lost every match—while receiving great cheers from the almost 20,000 fans who watched the tournament.

Hay represented Scotland for the third time in the championship. He and rinkmates third John Bryden, second Allan Glen and lead David Howie had little trouble with the U.S.

But in the final the rink just couldn't get going. In the seventh end Hay raised a Canadian rock accidentally and allowed Northcott to score three. In the next end Hay missed a takeout that could have allowed him to count two.

Chevvy's Checks Tonic for Leafs

The kind of body-checks Victoria Maple Leaf players like to see are those handed out on occasion by William S. Shvetz.

Wednesday's 4-2 Western Hockey League victory over Vancouver Canucks supplied testimony for the Chevvy tonic.

Shvetz was in a hitting mood in robust game, and the Leaf team, as a whole, responded with a solid, all-around effort.

"When Chevvy is hitting," said coach Frank Mario, "it seems to spark the whole team."

Mario feels a similar display could provide another victory Saturday night when the Leafs entertain the league-leading Portland Buckaroos at Memorial Arena.

FRED HUCUL INJURED

"Games we won or tied with Portland earlier this year were ones in which Chevvy did a lot of hitting," said Mario.

Mario isn't as concerned about Shvetz as he is about Fred Hucul. Victoria's top-scoring defenceman, Hucul suffered a wrenched back in the late stages of Wednesday's game.

Hucul is expected to dress and Mario is hopeful the pain will clear up enough to give the defenceman complete mobility.

Tickets for Saturday's game are going at a brisk pace. Victoria manager Buck Houle said a sellout would boost Leafs' gross receipts to more than $200,000 for 32 home games.

Liddell, Hicks Top Event

Mrs. T. J. Liddell and Mrs. W. V. Hicks topped "A" Division in the women's annual Winter Cup competition at Uplands Golf Club.

Mrs. Hicks posted the best low gross score of 263 for three rounds and Mrs. Liddell was low-net winner with 228.

In "B" Division, Mrs. M. Cave (gross 292) and Mrs. R. B. Young (net 238) took top honors.

Mrs. G. Lovitt won this week's par competition at Uplands, finishing even with regulation figures. Mrs. A. B. Young (1 up) won "B" Division and Mrs. J. Drummond (2 up) paced "C" swingers.

Button Holders Triumph on 18th

Larry McCooey and Roy Johnson of Colwood had a narrow escape before retaining the city senior golf buttons at Uplands this week.

All-Blacks May Play Match at Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP)—The New Zealand All-Blacks rugby team will probably play two games in Canada next year.

Robert Spray, president of the Rugby Union of Canada, said it is "very probable" the New Zealand team will play in Vancouver Oct. 14, 1967, and that the union is trying to arrange a game in either Toronto or Montreal for Oct. 17.

Brewer in Good Spot To Continue Streak

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Gay Brewer is in a good spot to continue the hottest streak in pro golf as the $82,000 Greater Jacksonville Open heads into the second round today.

One stroke off the six-under-par 66 pace set Thursday by Tommy Bolt, Brewer was in a strong position because of his consistency of recent months when he won four tournaments.

For Bolt, whose expert shots over the last 20 years have been overshadowed by his tendency to react to a bad one by smashing a club against a tree, all was serene through his 34-32-66.

Neither is Ed Furgol, 49, former National Open champion who shot a 67 to tie Brewer for second place after 18 holes.

Bag-Toting 'Gold Trail' This Summer

By ERNIE FEDORUK

Victoria's summer golf season can be a bit of a "gold trail" for city youngsters.

But they won't have to turn pro to collect.

The magic word is caddy.

There is going to be a heavy demand for bag-toters, and with this serving as a partial invitation, today seems to be a good time to announce that the Victoria District Committee's annual junior golf clinic will be held at Douglas Golflands during Easter.

The clinic, for boys and girls under 19, will be held April 12-14. The school is limited to 100. Youngsters do not have to be members of clubs.

Application forms will be published at the weekend and these should be submitted, along with a $2 registration fee, as soon as possible.

Students must bring along at least three clubs to the clinic — a wood, iron and putter.

A caddy clinic, sponsored by the Vancouver Island branch of the National Association of Lefthanded Golfers, will be held in June under the direction of veteran professional Fred Burns and Colwood's Laurie Kerr.

While it is the NALG's wish to groom caddies for the national tournament July 19-22, the clinic will also be completed before the Pacific Northwest Amateur tournament, July 4-9.

Another tournament that puts out a heavy demand for caddies, the Northwest Seniors' event, will be held in August.

For those who qualify, the three tournaments could provide city youngsters with opportunities to pick up summer spending money.

NEW WARNING DEVICE

Beeps to Prevent Plane Collisions

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (AP) — McDonnell Aircraft Corp. announced Thursday it has developed a warning device that can eliminate mid-air collisions of airplanes.

The device has been tested on McDonnell's phantom jet fighter planes and probably will be developed for use by airliners.

It provides a 60-second warning to airplanes converging at speeds of up to four times the speed of sound, (640 m.p.h. at sea level) and even tells the pilots what evasive action to take to avoid a collision, a McDonnell spokesman said.

Airlines have been seeking such a system for 10 years. McDonnell claimed it is the first to develop it, and in Washington, a spokesman for the Air Transport Association of America said a collision avoidance system "is closer to realization than at any previous time."

USES ARROWS

The safety device is called EROS for Eliminate Range Zero System. It gives collision warnings to airplanes 1½ miles apart. The cockpit indicator has up and down arrows and a leveloff light.

"When a collision warning has been evaluated by the system," the McDonnell spokesman said, "the pilots hear a beeping sound. Then they look at their indicators and take the necessary action."

Both planes must be equipped with the device.

The equipment is contained in a missile-shaped pod mounted under 26 Phantom jets, the planes produced by McDonnell and used in Viet Nam. The device has only been used in testing in the St. Louis area.

The spokesman said discussions with airlines, the Federal Aviation Agency and top military officials have been underway for some time on production of the system. No specific plans have been formulated, the company said.

McDonnell would not announce the cost of the device because, it said, there are "too many variables."

The device works on a radio signal transmitted every two seconds. By measuring the time delay between transmission by one aircraft and reception by another, the system figures the distance between planes, determines the rate of approach, and decides how the collision can be avoided.

The system can protect 1,000 aircraft at a time within a 40-mile radius of each other, as long as all are equipped with the device, a spokesman said.

One spokesman said the device would be too costly for private airplane owners, but would be within the reach of airlines, the military and companies which own their own planes.

Bandits Executed

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Six bandits were executed by a firing squad Thursday in a troop-ringed temple courtyard, only 150 yards away from a market where they killed five persons in a raid last December.

Blood Demand Jumps

TRAIL (CP)—The demand for blood in Canada rises by about eight per cent each year, Red Cross national commissioner Major-General Arthur Wrinch of Toronto, said here.

CYPRUS FORCE MAY LEAVE

DUBLIN (Reuters) — The Republic of Ireland has announced its peacekeeping force in Cyprus will be withdrawn April 18 unless the United Nations meets the cost of an extra three-month term of duty.

External Affairs Minister Frank Aiken said in the Dail (parliament) Wednesday this represented a change in policy. Formerly the government has been prepared to pay for Ireland's contribution to the force. He added:

"I think if we are accused of anytihng, it is that we have tried to do too much for international peace."

Influence Peddling Charged

TORONTO (CP) — Kenneth Bryden (NDP — Toronto-Woodbine) introduced two letters in the legislature Thursday, claiming both indicated that a senior fund raiser of the Progressive Conservative party engaged in influence-peddling during the 1963 provincial election.

Mr. Bryden called for a judicial inquiry into the circumstances outlined in the letters.

Premier John Robarts later promised the legislature he will examine all the facts, then decide what action should be taken.

The first letter, dated Jan. 17, 1962, is from Sarto Marchand, president of Melchers Distilleries Ltd. of Montreal, to James Neal McDowell, then Ontario sales manager of the firm.

It referred to a conversation between Mr. Marchand and Harry Price, a Toronto insurance broker who worked for the Conservative party as a fund raiser.

MENTIONED GROSSMAN

In the letter Mr. Marchand said of Mr. Price:

"He made it a point to mention that he was very close to the new Ontario Liquor Control Board chairman, Mr. Allan Grossman, and that we would find him very co-operative."

Mr. Grossman, now minister of reform institutions, was then chief commissioner of the liquor board.

The second letter, dated Aug. 20, 1963, was from Mr. McDowell to Mr. Marchand.

The letters are on file at Osgoode Hall in Toronto as evidence in a civil suit brought in 1963 by Mr. McDowell against Melchers, Mr. Bryden said.

When Mr. Bryden finished speaking, Mr. Grossman hotly denied that anyone had ever used undue influence on him. He said this case "has been held over my head for three years."

"During the 1963 election campaign an attempt was made to blackmail me with that letter."

WON'T GIVE NAME

In response to questions from Mr. Bryden, he refused to name the person who attempted to blackmail him.

Mr. Bryden told the house he was reading the letters because of their description of the activity of Mr. Price, "a leading fund-raiser for the Progressive Conservative party of Ontario."

"There is no evidence either in the letters or elsewhere . . . that the present and past chief commissioners were in fact subject to the influence that Mr. Price claimed."

Before Mr. Grossman rose to defend himself, Mr. Bryden said there can be no question of the authenticity of the letters. He said Mr. McDowell has taken an oath verifying the copies on file.

Mr. Bryden said the Marchand letter indicated that money had changed hands. The letter said:

"After a long discussion on Ontario politics, Mr. Price was given an envelope containing an amount which he had asked for and he seemed very satisfied with our co-operation."

CONTAINED CASH

Mr. Bryden said the envelope obviously contained cash.

Mr. Grossman called a press conference later and flatly denied that Mr. Price had ever discussed with him brands of liquor sold by the LCBO.

Mr. Price was unavailable for comment.

In his suit against Melchers, Mr. McDowell names two Conservative party officials and a cabinet minister and claims Mr. Marchand gave the party a large sum of money to secure influence in government circles

Mr. McDowell claims he lost position and salary with Melchers because he had refused to pay the money to a party official. He asked $50,000 damages and a further $200,000 punitive damages.

The writ was issued Sept. 6, 1963, but the trial date for the case has not been set.

SUKARNO PUTS UP FIGHT

Radio Jakarta also quoted Lt.-Gen. Suharto, the country's new strongman, as saying "opportunists" and "vested interests" were trying to interfere. Observers said he apparently was referring to several political parties with nominees for the cabinet.

Sources said the new cabinet probably would have 24 to 30 members, compared with the unwieldy 100-man cabinet Sukarno put together over the years.

The Indonesian parliament, an appointed advisory assembly, urged Thursday that the new cabinet be free from Communist elements.

Technicians Wanted Everywhere

And each year in the future 10 per cent could be added to the figure.

The estimate comes from the federal department of labor, which also points out that at present Canada is producing only a fraction of the graduates needed. By 1967 the graduate output will be 4,400 per annum.

These and other like facts are included in a booklet, "Supply and Demand—Technological Institute Graduates," which is now available from National Employment Service here.

The booklet is intended for students of Canadian institutes of technology but also has value for prospective employers, teachers and school counsellors, says George Bevis, NES manager.

With starting salaries for technicians ranging from $390 to $400 a month, the booklet suggests that many more high school students should give thought to this type of training.

RELIEF GROUP SETS OUT

Death-Defying Expedition Completes Vertical Assault

The new milestone in the history of Alpine climbing was accomplished by four West Germans and a Briton, all that was left of a 13-man, three-country group which set out on the wall 30 days ago. Two completed the climb late Thursday.

The final leg of the ascent to the 13,036-foot summit over a treacherous ice field was carried out despite howling winds and temperatures down to 40 below zero.

There had been fear for the safety of the climbers after 16 hours elapsed without contact. But the clouds parted for a time and they could be seen by telescope as they neared completion of their climb.

Then a jubilant radio message from the mist-shrouded peak announced tersely at dusk that the expedition was crowned with success.

West Germans Joerg Lehne, 29, and Guenther Strobel, 24, were the first to reach the summit.

UNDAUNTED BY GALES

Neither gales lashing the Alps nor the death of American teammate John Harlin three days ago stopped the Alpinists.

Eiger has been scaled many times before but never over the vertificial-ascent route.

Today's venture crowns years of efforts by generations of Alpinists, 26, of whom lost their lives on the towering, triangular mountain.

MOUNT CLEMENS, Mich. (UPI) — The U.S. air force said today its top scientific adviser on unidentified flying objects believes marsh gasses were responsible for mass sightings of weird glowing objects this week.

An air force public information employee at Selfridge Air Force Base here said Dr. J. Allen Hynek, scientific adviser to its "Project Blue Book" program to trace UFO sightings, would make the disclosure in a news conference today.

Hynek has been investigating sightings in Michigan this week.

New War Intolerable, Erhard Tells World

BONN (Reuters) — Chancellor Ludwig Erhard today appealed to all non-nuclear powers to follow West Germany's example and formally renounce production of nuclear weapons.

Erhard, presenting a seven-point "peace program" to Parliament, also called on the present atomic powers to reach agreement on the non-proliferation of nuclear weapons.

Erhard said West Germany is prepared to exchange "declarations of renunciation of the use of violence" with Russia, Czechoslovakia and any other European states.

Erhard said his country wants no new war and is doing all in its power to avoid it.

"The thought of a new war is intolerable in the German nation."

Erhard said German reunification is to be achieved only by peaceful means.

He made these other points:

—The federal government wants worldwide, general and controlled disarmament.

—The most difficult problems among peoples can be peacefully and justly solved.

—West Germany has settled its problems in the West, and would like to settle with its Eastern neighbors, too.

He said he would like a more friendly relationship with Czechoslovakia and that West Germany has no territorial claims on it.

PARK HASSLE

Strachan Remark Sparks Uproar

By JOHN MIKA
Legislative Reporter

The legislature exploded like a pressure cooker Thursday night after five hours of increasingly heated debate over the Western Mines development in Strathcona Park.

The argument boiled over into a flood of bitter shouting with Premier Bennett, Opposition Leader Robert Strachan and Liberal Leader Ray Perrault while the rest of the MLAs hooted and catcalled.

For a few moments the House was out of control but the immediate target of the fury — Pat McGeer (L—Vancouver-Point Grey) — was absent.

DEADLY THRUST

The uproar began as Liberals joined Socreds to decry Mr. Strachan's contention that up to 250 pounds of poisonous copper sulphate would go into Buttle Lake from the mining operation each day, posing a deadly threat to the game fish.

Mr. McGeer, pointing out he was a research chemist who had investigated the situation, accused Mr. Strachan of "misleading the House" because all the copper sulphate would be consumed by the mining process and could not enter the lake.

A few minutes later, after Mr. McGeer had left the chamber, Mr. Strachan rose again to attack the Liberals and Socreds for combining to try "to cover up a plan to destroy a public park" by private development.

'NOT DISINTERESTED'

"I was surprised that (McGeer) participated in this debate because according to the records of the companies office, he is not a disinterested party," Mr. Strachan said.

Premier Bennett and Mr. Perrault immediately erupted and all three shouted at each other.

"It was a personal attack on a member of the House," called Mr. Bennett.

Attorney-General Robert Bonner demanded a withdrawal of the imputation while Mr McGeer was absent and committee chairman William Speare ordered Mr. Strachan to make a retraction.

But Mr. Strachan began arguing with Mr. Speare and the premier jumped back into the fight:

"As leader of the government and this House I must accept responsibility for the individual integrity of all the members of this House.

"The member for Point Grey has been attacked by the leader of the Opposition in a dastardly way and he was not here to defend himself.

"As leader of the government I do not want this house to be brought down to the same state as Ottawa which the leader of the Opposition has been trying to do at this session."

Mr. Strachan stormed back that the premier was trying to create a scene to divert attention from Strathcona Park's fate.

"The premier is deliberately trying to create chaos in this house so that public attention will be directed toward the chaos instead of the bankrupt park policies of this government," he said.

"He is trying to create a

GUARD TIGHTENED

Warning British PM To Be Shot

LONDON (Reuters) — An anonymous telephone warning to Scotland Yard that someone planned to shoot Prime Minister Wilson prompted tighter security precautions around the campaigning Labor party leader today.

Detectives Thursday night guarded a hall in Dunstable in Bedfordshire while Wilson spoke amid constant interruption from hecklers, who were also active at a London meeting addressed by Conservative Leader Edward Heath.

Meanwhile, the latest opinion polls showed that the landslide victory confidently predicted for the Labor party may be whittled down somewhat by election day next Thursday.

One poll, published by the Daily Express, shows a slight swing toward the Conservatives although still giving labor a hefty lead of 13½ per cent.

The latest national opinion poll shows a slight drop in Labor's lead to 12.2 per cent from 13, and a Gallup poll survey shows Labor's margin had been trimmed to 8.5 per cent from 12.

'Good Times' To Continue

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada's good times have turned into a full-fledged boom with further expansion and higher prices still to come, Finance Minister Sharp reported today.

For the fiscal year ending March 31 he predicted a sharp cut in the federal government's budgetary deficit to $34,000,000—lowest in nine years. It was $38,000,000 in 1964-65 and as high as $791,000,000 in 1961-62.

In his budget speech a year ago Walter Gordon, Mr. Sharp's predecessor, had forecast a $300,000,000 deficit for the current year.

Mr. Sharp tabled in the Commons a background paper for his Tuesday night budget which also said:

—The current upswing in the business cycle, which began in the spring of 1961, is showing signs of maturity. But there are still strong pressures moving the economy ahead.

—The $34,000,000 deficit, resulting from 1965-66 revenues of $7,673,000,000 and expenditures of $7,707,000,000, brings the net debt to $15,538,000,000 or $782 per capita compared with $794 a year ago.

—Wage rates advanced more rapidly than in 1964 but productivity gains were slower, meaning higher labor costs per unit of output.

—Expansion and growth now have become more dependent on improved productivity, avoidance of bottlenecks and upgrading the quality of both labor and capital plant and equipment.

The review gave no final tabulation of gross national product—total value of all goods and services produced by the country—but said it is expected to be nine per cent higher than 1964's $47,003,000,000.

The white paper gave no hint as to what line of tax and spending policy Mr. Sharp may take in his budget. Its projections were based on existing tax rates.

"The economic climate changed during 1965 from one of moderate expansion in the early part of the year to one of boom at present," it said. "This change was brought about by the rapidly rising level of public and private investment superimposed on rising demands by consumers, governments and from exports."

There now was little if any slack in the economy and further expansion would depend on improved use of the country's capacity as well as its steady growth. In addition to the big increase in capital investment forecast for 1966, there would be continued increases in spendin by all levels of government an business and consumers.

"The productive facilities o the Canadian economy now are close to their maximum rate o utilization, and the present an anticipated rate of expansion i demand appears likely to strai the resources currently available to meet it."

As to prices, the report said ". . . Current upward pric trends could well persist, unless significant productivity improvements emerge to add t the supply capability of th economy or unless the rate o increase in demand should turn out to be notably lower than currently expected."

It added that conditions early in 1966 suggest "it would not b prudent to assume a rate of price increase any less than that recorded in 1965." At the end of 1965, the consumer price

Estimated budgetary deficit of $34,000,000 in 1965-66 fiscal year, down sharply from $300,000,000 forecast last April and lowest deficit in nine years.

Gross national product—total value of all goods and services produced—estimated nine per cent higher in 1965.

Further drop in unemployment predicted for 1966; high labor demand to be partly met by more married women and retired persons taking part-time work.

Revenues $7,673,000,000 and expenditures $7,707,000,000, both up seven per cent from 1964-65.

Surplus of $240,000,000 in old age pension operations, cut to $215,000,000 after paying off temporary treasury loan.

Net national debt up $34,000,000 in year at $15,538,400,000; per capita debt down $12 at $782.

DEBATE MAY EXTEND BEYOND MONDAY

Close Vote Certain on Death Penalty

By MICHAEL GILLAN

OTTAWA (CP) Two full days of Commons debate indicate that any vote on abolishing the death penalty will be won or lost by a hair.

In 27 speeches by MPs up to Thursday night, 13 are in favor of outright abolition, 12 want it retained for most offences now covered and two can be classified as undecided—at least until a vote is held.

The government has set aside three days for debating the issue, and with more than 80 members initially intending to speak there is no certainty there will be a vote Monday, the final scheduled day for the debate.

Today has been set aside for an interim money supply bill and some minor government measures.

Many strongly - worded speeches have been delivered against the resolution to scrap capital punishment but nobody has moved amendments so far.

The government is expected to postpone any decision about extending the debate until Monday shows whether a vote on the resolution will be taken. Any resolution would be followed by a bill to make any changes law.

Prime Minister Pearson several months ago pledged a free-vote on the issue, enabling a debate without party positions being taken.

The resolution, which substitutes a mandatory life sentence for hanging, was sponsored by four MPs in three parties. It would require the federal cabinet to approve any parole for a lifer.

At present planned and deliberate murders—capital murders—are punishable by death. But the Pearson government has commuted to life imprisonment 20 of these sentences since taking office in 1963. The Diefenbaker government had commuted three in a row before leaving office.

Non-capital murder, defined as all murders not planned and deliberate, is punishable by life imprisonment.

Abolitionist MPs tend to argue that the death penalty is not a deterrent, that hanging is a calculated killing repugnant to a supposedly - civilized society and that there is always the danger an innocent man will be executed.

Retentionists said it is uncertain whether the noose acts as a deterrent to potential murderers, that society is turning soft on criminals and that the state has a divine right to kill those who deliberately kill others.

"Only the rope can put an end to the bloody ambitions of some men," said Auguste Choquette (L—Lotbinière).

"Should we make it easier for contract killing?" asked Jack Horner (PC—Acadia).

"These are not schoolboys we are fooling around with," said Gerald Laniel (L — Beauharnois-Salaberry).

Less adamant about his retentionist views, Heath Macquarrie (PC—Queens) said that after a great deal of thought he has reluctantly decided he is a "non-dogmatic but convinced retentionist."

He said he didn't want to take the chance of abolishing the death penalty and rejected arguments that abolition is necessarily a sign of a civilized society.

MAKES MAIDEN SPEECH

For the abolitionists, Gerard Pelletier (L—Montreal Hochelaga) drew the most attention and applause as he delivered his first speech since his election last Nov. 8.

"It's no innovation to abolish the death penalty," said the former Montreal newspaper editor. "We would be merely completing something our fathers and grandfathers started a long time ago."

The mentally ill were no longer slain now that society was able to treat this illness and protect itself, he said.

R. G. L. Fairweather (PC—Royal), former New Brunswick attorney-general, described how his family had shared the "final agony" as his father, a Supreme Court justice in New Brunswick, had to impose a death sentence.

His father abhorred capital punishment and was "repelled by the defeat of society," Mr. Fairweather said.

CRIME RATE GROWS

Seven of the 12 retentionist MPs were from Quebec. Several talked about a growing crime rate and spoke of a fear that abolition would encourage organized crime.

Martial Asselin (PC—Charlevoix) said the number of murders in Quebec has doubled in the last five years. He thought the present law adequate but suggested that the gas chamber should be substituted for hanging.

Alexis Caron (L—Hull) said abolition would help gangsters. Pious supporters of abolition were playing into the hands of criminals in the same fashion as they unintentionally aided organized gangs by bringing about prohibition.

Jack McIntosh (PC — Swift Current-Maple Creek) said a government has a divine right to defend society in wartime and from murderers.

Divine authority had two laws about killing—one forbidding an individual to murder, another permitting the state to kill in order to defend society.

Another personal view was put forward by Harold Winch (NDP—Vancouver East), who witnessed a hanging 30 years ago when a member of the B.C. legislature.

'SOMETHING TO SEE'

It was "something to see"—the "gurgling and the sighing that came up from down below" the trap, he said. He supports abolition.

The only party leader to enter the debate so far, Creditiste chief Real Caouette said he will oppose the resolution unless the government gives an assurance that the death penalty will be retained for certain crimes.

But his party colleagues could vote as they wish.

Mr. Caouette said responsibility for final decision on executions should be turned over to the provinces—some provinces can hang if they want and others wouldn't have to.

Monday will probably show whether the prime minister and Opposition Leader Diefenbaker—the two Commons members who have had the ultimate decision on whether to commute or let a man be hanged—will enter the debate.

Mr. Diefenbaker, prime minister from 1957 to 1963, asked Wednesday whether Mr. Pearson planned to speak. The prime minister replied that he wanted to hear some of the debate before deciding whether to participate.

Unlike the 1960 debate on capital punishment, which did not produce a vote, the spectators galleries have only been sparsely filled and attendance of MPs at times had dropped almost down to the quorum minimum of 20.

BOYCOTT CALLED OFF

Park Development Sharing Proposed

Recreation and Conservation Minister Kenneth Kiernan Thursday told the legislature he had resumed talking to Northern Affairs Minister Arthur Laing.

He wrote the federal minister the previous day offering to share development costs for Garibaldi Park near Vancouver but not if it involved turning over the provincial title to Ottawa.

He also indicated that he thought the federal government would be better advised to purchase private land to establish a national seashore park and suggested one parcel of 400 acres with 3,000 feet of waterfront on the Sechelt Peninsula could be bought for $250,000.

The letter reversed Mr. Kiernan's statement to the legislature several weeks ago. He said then he would never talk or write to Mr. Laing again until the federal government gave B.C. a copy of the legal brief it will present to the Supreme Court of Canada reference on its claims to jurisdiction over off-shore mineral rights.

BREECH OF FAITH

Mr. Kiernan said Mr. Laing gave him a commitment more than two years ago that he would forward a copy but it was never fulfilled. He said it was a breach of faith he would not forgive.

In his letter, Mr. Kiernan repeated the charge of a broken promise but added "there is no point in belaboring this matter and as far as I'm concerned, the episode is closed."

The remainder of the letter was a reply to Mr. Laing's public offer last fall of $10 million for Garibaldi development if it was turned over to be a national park.

MINERALS HEARING STARTS IN NOVEMBER

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal - provincial dispute over ownership of the offshore mineral rights will come before the Supreme Court of Canada in November, it was learned Thursday.

All the provinces but Quebec and Saskatchewan have agreed to put forward their arguments to the nine justices, who have been asked by Prime Minister Pearson to rule on the multi-million-dollar question.

Both the federal and provincial governments claim jurisdiction over oil and mineral deposits under the sea. Both have been issuing licences for exploration to oil companies.

By this time Mr. McGeer had re-entered the chamber and Mr. Strachan repeated his accusation that he was not a "disinterested party" and entered the debate improperly.

OWNS SHARES

Mr. McGeer (who later told reporters he owned some shares in Western Mines) said he had earlier put himself on record as opposed to any mines in provincial parks.

"When I rose to defend the government, the point I made was a point of scientific information," he said.

"The leader of the Opposition, in my opinion, misled the house and when I closed my remarks I said there were better reasons for opposing mining in the parks.

"The leader of the Opposition, by his imputation, has not added to the dignity and decorum of this house."

All through the debate, MLAs snapped angrily at each other and at one point Mr. Strachan said the government "is so jumpy and so nervous about this because we've cut close to the bone."

David Barrett (NDP—Dewdney) and Recreation and Conservation Minister Kenneth Kiernan angrily berated each other as Mr. Barrett demanded to know if scientific testing of copper sulphate's potential harm to the lake had been or would be undertaken.

BADGERED

Mr. Kiernan protested he was being repeatedly badgered on the same points.

He said the fish and game branch and pollution control branch would first have to approve dumping of mine tailings into the lake before the parks branch would even consider the company's application for permission.

Mr. Kiernan also said that in regard to the copper sulphate — if that is the chemical used by the company in its process — he would give assurance that:

Either it will not be dumped in the lake, or if it is dumped in the lake it will be after reasonable certainty that no harm will result, or, if it is dumped and found detrimental to lake life the company will have to find another method of disposing of mine tailings carrying it.

MAKE TESTS

Water Rersouces Minister Ray Williston said his pollution control board would make tests in the lake before copper sulphate is used or mine tailings are permitted to be dumped in the lake.

Randolph Harding (NDP—Kaslo-Slocan) said that last year the legislature was not informed that a road would be needed throught the park to service the mine "but now we are told that it is logical and you add this and you add that — retreating step by step — until we wind up dumping tailings into the lake."

CHANGED HANDS

Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) said Western Mines recently changed hands for $193,000, which "would have been a trifling sum to save Strathcona as a wilderness park."

Mr. Macdonald accused Mr Kiernan of misleading the legislature at the last session that huge sums would be needed to buy out Western Mines in order to stop the development.

"We lost our chance to save Strathcona last session by not spending what amounts to a piddling sum in the government's budget and future generations will rue the day," he said.

The debate was sidetracked numerous times into shouting matches, arguments over procedure and lengthy speeches before Mr. Kiernan's salary vote of $32,870 was passed.

index was 2.9 per cent higher than a year previous.

Personal savings rose to $3,098,000,000 in 1965 from $2,181,000,000 in 1964, doubling the figure of five years ago. "Part of the increase was due to a higher level of farm incomes resulting from a succession of good crops and exceptional wheat marketings."

TAX TAKE RISES

Reviewing 1965-66 revenue and expenditure accounts, the white paper said personal income tax collections are up $46,700,000 to an estimated $2,150,000,000 from $2,103,300,000 in 1964-65. Corporation tax collections are up $86,200,000 to $1,610,000,000 from $1,523,800,000.

Sales tax collections rose by $180,400,000, or 15 per cent, to $1,385,000,000 from $1,204,600,000.

Total tax collections were up $465,200,000 to $6,832,000,000 from $6,366,800,000. Non-tax revenue such as post office income and return on investments brought total budgetary revenues for 1965-66 to $7,673,000,000, up $492,700,000 from $7,180,300,000 in 1964-65.

Defence spending, at $1,585,000,000, represented 21 per cent of total budgetary expenditures. It was 22 per cent in 1964-65.

The budgetary accounts do not include such funds as the old age security fund, which in the fiscal year now ending took in $1,163,000,000 and paid out $923,000,000 in $75-a-month pensions to everyone 69 or older.

Guenther Schnaidt, 32, and Roland Vutteler, 23, both West Germans, and Scotsman Douglas Haston, 24, of Edinburgh.

Haston is the only member of the original five - man Anglo-American group who stuck it out to the end.

RELIEF ON THE WAY

A four - man relief group, headed by veteran Alpinist Anton Hiebeler of Germany, was on the way up to establish contact.

The relief party carried food and batteries for radio sets of the climbing party, made up of four Germans and one Scotsman.

The relief party hoped to come near the summit by the comparatively easy west side route. But with temperatures nearing 40 below zero and the wind estimated at 100 miles an hour, even that venture involved deadly risk.

"It's hell up there," he said. "Not enough ropes and things. Not all of us can go to the top."

Reports Navy Misbehaved Mystifying to Commodore

HALIFAX (CP) — Commodore John C. O'Brien, senior Canadian naval officer afloat, says Brazilian newspaper reports that Canadian sailors misbehaved during visits to that country last month are "a complete mystery" to him.

"We've never met anything like it before," he said today. "It's particularly mystifying because the general atmosphere at the Brazilian ports we visited was extremely friendly."

Commodore O'Brien made this comment to reporters who questioned him on his arrival here aboard the aircraft carrier Bonaventure, flagship of a 13-ship task group that called at West Indies and South American ports on a winter training cruise.

The 73-day trip was the biggest fleet exercise for the navy since the 1950s. Almost 4,000 men took part. Four West Coast ships were included in the task group. Bonaventure left Halifax Jan. 12.

GET WARM WELCOME

Commodore O'Brien said Brazil's government leaders and naval commanders gave the Canadians a warm welcome. The Brazilian navy rationed water to its ships so that the Canadian vessels could have ample supplies.

He said the number of "incidents" involving Canadian sailors ashore in Brazil was no more than expected when up to 3,000 men get leave. Visits to Uruguay, Argentina, Puerto Rico and Trinidad produced no published criticism.

The fleet spent 55 days at sea and 18 days in various ports for maintenance and recreation.

East Coast units steamed a total of 15,304 miles. West Coast ships will have logged 20,589 miles by the time they reach Esquimalt, B.C., April 7.

The task group commander said the value of southern training cruises in winter was confirmed by this year's exercise. Working in warmer waters away from North Atlantic storms made it possible for the navy to do almost a year's training in a few months.

"The exercise has been most successful in maintaining our high state of combat readiness," Commodore O'Brien said.

By the time you've got the throttle only part way open, you'll have a pretty good idea of just how fast the Evinrude 100 really is. And you'll wonder why a motor like this one was never introduced before. You see, this is a new kind of high performance outboard. It antiquates the theory that you've got to make a motor monstrously high, and let's face it, homely; to get the kind of action you find in every Evinrude 100.

The Evinrude 100 is the product of the industry's most sophisticated engineering. Instead of making it bigger, Evinrude used the complex method of exhaust tuning to bring out the high power today's boating requires. It took the most advanced computers to work out the formula and the effect of this tuning is the same as super-charging—without the mechanical complications. The result: reduced back pressure, a remarkable step-up in combustion efficiency, more torque, faster acceleration, higher speeds, more miles per gallon than ever before with any high horsepower motor.

And a few other benefits accrue, also. Being a V4, the Evinrude 100 is gentle to your boat. This hundred-horse motor won't shake the transom off. And it's quiet because it's sound-sealed to the water line.

See the new Evinrude 100 and the two other V4 outboards—the 60 and 80 at your Evinrude Dealer's now. There are 15 motors in the Evinrude line for 1966, and he's got them for you to see. Also, OMC stern drive units: 90, 120, 150 and 200 hp. models.

All Evinrudes use a 50-1 gas/oil mixture, which increases engine life, saves wear and expense. And every Evinrude carries a full 2-year warranty.
